A ZINE SUPPORTING THE DO-IT-YOURSELF ETHICS OF THE PUNK COMMUNITY

SOME THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITOR

ABOUT THIS ISSUE

So I've been freaking out, trying to get caught up on reviews due to my overwhelmed and procrastination, and then I've got way too many to fit into the allotted space. It seems that we're always making excuses, wanting things to be other than they are. I feel like with each issue I want to say — "I wanted to get so much more in here" and that has become the norm which I always fight with and against. This time, thanks to the help I got, we got a ton of reviews done and now space is the issue. Well, as always there will be more next time around and this is going on a regular basis — even with my hectic schedule (of actually working full time). I'm glad to have Fly's comic back in here. I know in the past some people have not understood how it fits into the program of the rest of this zine — it's tongue in cheek and very NY so just enjoy it. I'm sorry to not have more of the regular columns; a part which I've been enjoying more in here. The "Selling Out" story may seem kinda odd to some, I mean who would think that I would run a story that even hints at supporting Chumbawamba. But when I read that story in Sascha's zine I read so much more into it than just that. Sascha and I shared a life (long ago it seems, in NYC) and that story recaptures the history of that life. Whether you like Chumbawamba, support them or not is irrelevant — there's so much more to it than that. And I'm also really glad to have China's Future Generation column a regular feature in S&L. The book reviews will return with the next issue — sorry they didn't make it into this one. I had hoped to also continue the gardening column, especially since I now have several people contributing to the subject. Even though summer is the fitting time to publish those gardening columns all the gardeners are busy being outside rather than writing. Next time around Sascha will have more tales from the Linnea Farm and there may be other stuff too.

THE HEAT & THE GARDEN

As for my garden — it's going great! It's very rewarding to grow your own food. My lettuce season ended as the heat settled in. My squash and zucchini took over and then the tomatoes, which I still have a ton of. There's nothing better than home-grown vine-ripened tomatoes. I found that my potted herbs weren't growing. They weren't dying either — they were just dormant and I knew that the roots weren't taking. It turns out they needed a bit of minerals and vitamins to combat the extreme heat and humidity which I am also trying to get used to, and now they're doing much better. The herbs in the ground are rocking and spreading quickly. I'm learning a lot from my small garden and already making plans for the fall as well as for next spring. As the sizzling heat has settled in, I find it harder to be outside which is frustrating because I crave the sun and being outdoors. But I hate the extreme heat. As I knew — that adjustment is the hardest for me to make. I can't help but look around and see how many people live in totally artificial environments. Air-conditioning at home, at work and even in the car. How much time does the average upper-crust person spend actually outside? Much as I hate the heat — I do try to get outside every day and stay in touch with it all. As I drive around in the sweltering inferno of my car I notice that most people around here do have air-conditioning in their cars and I can't help but think how much of a privilege that is. I am obsessed with the weather and the temperature so I cango on and on about it.

TECHNOPHOBIA & THE INTERNET

One of the things that I have noticed very strongly this summer is just how much the internet has taken over. I know that it's been spreading and growing all around me for years. But suddenly in the past several months it's made a whole new jump into the lives of all of those around me. Suddenly people who used to be reachable by phone or mail are only accessible through the computer. People who I deal with on a regular basis are near impossible to contact. Just about every classified or band I review has an email address. It scares me. I have been very resistant to the whole thing. I'm a total technophobe. But all the while I can recognize it as a tool that can be useful and helpful. What I don't like is the obsessiveness of it — how it totally consumes people to the point where they are on-line all day long and live only through a computer. There are a ton of reasons why I think it is both scary and dangerous. There are also reasons why it's helpful and useful. I know it's great for communicating, especially overseas. It's also great for spreading information fast and likewise getting up-to-date information when you need it. Unfortunately so much bullshit comes with that usefulness. The advertising that bombards you on the net. The way people can spread more bullshit, gossip and lies without having a face to take the rap and wasting a hell of a lot of time in doing so. The way people can become further alienated and less able to communicate one-on-one. The more we rely on computers, the more distanced we become from those around us. Communication is important and in our "bigger, better, faster, now" mentality world — it is of course fitting. But in the process of it all we need to remember that communication with those around us is just as important. I know that one day I will end up with email, but I'm so reluctant to give in to any of it. I have a computer that is over 5 years old and it's already out-dated. I can't keep up with new software even if I could afford it and wanted to cause my computer is essentially obsolete. I have always hated the way the industry forces you to continually buy more products in order to simply keep up. Whatever is currently on the market is already obsolete and it's only a matter of time before you're new item will have to be replaced. It's like all of the evils of J.G. Ballard's science fiction right in front of us. The more that this stuff takes over, the more I want to run the other way and revert to using even less technology. The more you pull yourself out of society, the harder it is to even attempt to keep up. And once you're out of the loop you can't even attempt to get back in. It's the same reason why those people who find themselves homeless due to some catastrophe will find it near impossible to get back into society if they so choose. You can't get a job if you don't have a home and you can get a home if you don't have a job, etc. etc.

THE BUSINESS OF PUNK

Another thing that has been on my mind a lot lately is the business of punk. I've been having a lot of conversations with a friend in Europe, looking the differences of how we do things in the states vs. how many people in Europe are able to live. Most of us here have to have a job in order to support our lifestyle and then we can do our punk rock things for fun. Some people get to a point where their punk rock things take so much time that they want to fully dedicate themselves to their projects, which in turn leaves little time for working a job to earn an income. So it seems a logical step to attempt to live off of your projects. But then the ethics of the diy scene get all tangled up. Most of us have the approach of being non-profit. And if profit is taken, it's minimal and used to keep the effort moving along. I've always felt that if one is able to fully dedicate themselves to their project and squeak by paying their bills, etc., from that project, without taking advantage of anyone nor ripping anyone off — then that is the ultimate situation. But of course there are so many people who are driven by a different motive. Whether it be wanting to have great success of profits or simply not to settle for squeaking by but ensuring they do much better than that. It brings up a whole bunch of sticky issues. And the older you get the more these issues come about. It doesn't sit well with most of us to have to work for someone else in order to do what we really want. Especially at a time when what we really want to do is actually an attainable reality. It's a weird time in the punk world. Punk has become accessible to the mainstream and the media once again. Not that it means that everyone can "sell out" and reap the rewards — but there are possibilities lingering if you move in a certain direction that a few years ago just wouldn't have been there. Personally I'm not into it at all. And I resist these attempts as much as that of the internet. But I find myself getting continually upset over it. Upset that there are those who are tempted by these $$'s in the sky when my own ideals and ethics run so deep. Upset that record labels that act like indies are really subsidiaries of bigger labels. Upset that small labels simply aspire to operate like the big labels. I think that is the worst part of it. That at this time when the boundaries are overlapping — the major labels are sending these hand-written notes and trying to get press in "zines" in an attempt to get the "underground's" attention. While the small self-run labels are sending out mad-promotional materials that mimic the mainstream. This whole thing, much the same as technology makes me want to run away and give it all up and hide out in the woods. Of course that is not a solution, nor something I really want to do (at least not yet). I suppose if anything it makes my mission with S&L that much more idealistic and imperative. It is important to continually question and challenge those things in front of you.

THE USUAL PUNK ROCK EUPHORIA

As for traveling — I've not been doing any of it. I'm pretty content here in Virginia, despite the heat. My garden keeps me content. S&L is demanding as ever. I've accepted that I will never feel caught up, but I obsessively do the best I can to stay on top of it all. We did go up to Philadelphia to see Los Crudos and Drop Dead at the beginning of May — which was awesome. Stalag 13 really has their shit together. They've cleaned the place up a lot — and now say their are sXe and emo friendly — which may sound dorky but after the cess-pool of drunken debauchery, that is a positive improvement in my eyes. They've got a space where people can table and for this particular show there were a ton of people who all have super huge smiles on their faces. Great bands and totally good vibe all around. I forget sometimes how many people who frequented ABC NO RIO are actually from NJ — which is just as close as Philly. So there were a ton of familiar faces and good old friends. It reminded me so much of the old days at ABC NO RIO. It was one of those awesome days that give me the re-affirmed faith in the punk community as well as inspiration for time to come. I had planned to go to Atlanta for the Prank Fest, but the forces that be conspired against me and kept me from going. Since I knew Damad would be coming to Richmond shortly there-after I accepted it a little bit better. The last couple months went into helping to organize the Richmond Hardcore Fest which took place on the July 4th weekend. I'd like to say it went off without a hitch, and it almost did. The venue worked out well — it was in a middle school. Unfortunately the attendance was poor — and it felt really lame overall. It's amazing how based on talk around town a 3 day festival was considered to be "an Avail show" on Saturday day. Of course we all expect a big turn-out for Avail and it was awesome that they played and that show went over well (for the most part). But the other shows were really disappointing. Damad played though which make everything worthwhile for me. They absolutely fucking rule! Lots of other good bands played too. My other obsession was with my favorites Ex-Members Of. The Boils came from PA to play to less than 20 people along with Underprivileged Nation. Kill the Man Who Questions are another awesome band that I saw in Philly and also at the fest. Like 30 bands played in all. We all learned a lot about what to do better next time (mostly getting it totally organized much earlier so that word can be spread earlier and more thoroughly). Thanks to all the bands who traveled to play. Trial just played the other day which was awesome beyond words. Again, that show was pretty poorly attended — I think I'm learning that is a thing that happens in the summer in what is actually pretty much of a college town. I had my own personal euphoria though in seeing one of my favorite bands. Shit — I've seen just about all my favorites this summer: Avail, Damad, Trial, Ex-Members Of, Los Crudos, Drop Dead, Boy Sets Fire. Silent Majority will play next month. I had hoped to see Morning Again too — a band I've been super obsessed with and keep saying I'd drive to Florida to see. But when they ended up in North Carolina last weekend it just happened to be the same time that Adrienne was visiting and best friends take a precedence to anything else. It was rad to have Adrienne back in Richmond. It's a funny story that the whole reason I ended up in Richmond in the first place is cause Adrienne lived here. I became obsessed with wanting to visit Adrienne when Karoline would be in town too, which came about a little over 2 years ago. My obsession with Richmond continued to grow. Adrienne, Karoline and I have since caused spontaneous combustion by being together in one place. And then Adrienne and I ended up trading places — she moved to NYC and I moved to Richmond. It's awesome that we share things in that way, but it would have been nice if we could have been in the same place together for longer.

So things are good. Best friends linger around and come to visit. Good bands surround me and keep me going. My garden is growing. I'm taking Yoga classes and finding peace and balance in my life. The sizzling summer creeps forward. I'm content. My roots are in the ground. And the big news is that Erik proposed to me and next year we're going to get hitched! Keep on rockin' — Chris(tine) July 1998

SELLING OUT

by Sascha Dubrul

I stayed up late writing the other night and I was listening to the radio, flipping across the channels, checking out the local New Orleans and Baton Rouge stations. There was this one kind of catchy song I kept hearing, it was all over the dial, one of those songs you inadvertently start humming days after you've heard it and only then do you realize that it's been stuck in the back of your head jingling around like an old TV ad for the past week. The voices sounded familiar and I could have sworn it was this really cool band I used to listen to a long time ago, but I couldn't imagine why the big commercial stations would be playing their song next to all the other fluffy pop dance hits I'd been hearing in the background since the Summertime. I was scribbling away, not paying much attention, when the radio announcer came on and said something like: "...and that was the latest smash hit from the UK pop combo Chumbawamba!" I dropped my pen.

Do you remember back around 1985 when all those icons of rock got together and had that huge concert called "Live Aid" to send money to the starving children of Ethiopia? It was a huge extravaganza with all the big names of the time like Michael Jackson, Cindy Lauper, Sting, Boy George, Phil Collins, and Bono coming out to support relief for the famine in Africa. It was the same era as "We Are the World," do you remember that shit? Coked-out superstars holding hands in some music studio and singing about giving money to the poor? It's not just some figment of your twisted imagination, that really happened, we all watched it on TV.

Or at least I watched it. Back in the mid 80's, I was still in elementary school and mostly what we did after school where I was from was go home and sit in front of our TV sets and watch this new and exciting stuff they called MTV: three minute, fast-speed, cut-up rock advertisements blended together with watered down images of sex and violence for the Pepsi generation. Like most of the kids my age, I'd just stopped watching Sesame Street a couple years back and this was basically the same thing — the colorful puppets and bouncing alphabets replaced by super models and flashy guitars. I was your typical preteen of the time who sucked up all the garbage in front of me, from Def Leppard videos to Clearasil commercials. I ate up pop culture because it was what everyone else did and it was what I felt like connected me to the rest of the world.

I was one of those kids that didn't have hardly any friends when I was growing up because I couldn't run fast and all the boys in my school played softball. I was always the kid who got picked last when they were dividing up the teams. I hated sports and competition. I was the kid daydreaming in the back of the classroom. I remember getting beaten up and getting called stupid because I couldn't spell or hold my pen right. None of the cool kids ever wanted to talk to me cause I didn't have the right clothes. I was what they called a loser.

So when I was young I'd retreat to the imaginary world of the TV. All my childhood imaginary playmates were always TV show stars: Gary Coleman from "Different Strokes" and Ricky Schroder from "Silver Spoons," Mr. T from "The A-Team." I'd come home after school and start watching TV and not turn it off until I went to sleep, the glow from the screen keeping me company from the twelfth story of the apartment complex where we lived. It was the electronic babysitter for my parents who were always off working late, my faithful playmate and teacher.

My models for the relationships in my life came straight out of the relationships I'd see on TV, all that stuff had a huge effect on me as a kid. I remember getting big crushes on movie actresses and being totally lonely and depressed when I'd realize that I had no chance of ever knowing them in real life and they didn't really exist anyway. I remember feeling the emotions like the worst of heartbreaks I've ever known since that time. Life was really confusing and TV culture had this way of tugging deep on all my insecurities and pre-adolescent needs.

So like I was saying, I remember when that whole Live-Aid thing happened because I was super excited, all the big pop stars were going to be together in the same place at the same time and back then that meant more to me than anything that was happening around in my real life. I'd been programmed for weeks with little clips in between videos to be ready to watch it on TV all day. I think when it actually happened it was kind of a let down, I don't really remember it, another big show washed over in my mind with a thousand others just like it.

By junior high school I'd gone to a few rock concerts (I'd win free tickets by calling up the local radio station until I was the lucky 95th caller and pledge my soul as a dedicated listener) and I'd always end up feeling distanced from the performers, like they were some kind of super human beings and I was just one of a million souls watching something that I'd had nothing to do with. It was this strange mix of contempt and admiration that would leave me feeling totally empty and sad. I looked up to the people on the stage but once again it was that feeling of them being so far away from my life that I wasn't even sure they really existed. Not too long after that whole time I started to become really disillusioned with the pop culture I'd been fed all my life in this vague, hard to articulate, alienated kind of way.

Sometimes I feel like so many of my childhood memories have been glossed over with this thick layer of sitcoms and action show episodes, like so many of my memories aren't even my own, they're just some script that someone wrote in Hollywood somewhere. Sometimes I have trouble untangling in my mind what was real and what I just watched on TV, the apartment I grew up in from all those cardboard living room sets, the nightly news and the war movies. I wonder sometimes how many people out there have had the same experience. I wonder how many of us have the same implanted culture festering away in our brains somewhere, this bonding link with other people our age because we all grew up with the same dumb shit.

Anyway, at some point I exploded and a couple years later me and my friends were punks. And I had a lot of friends by the way, because there were a lot of us alienated, fucked up kids. There was this one neighborhood we'd all hang out in and kids from all over the country would run away from home and come live in the abandoned buildings and hang out on the street. A lot of my friends had been through way worse shit then I could have ever even thought up in my middle-class liberal Manhattan dream world: their step-fathers had beaten or raped them, they'd been locked up and escaped from juvie or psych wards, they came from trailer parks and ghettos in middle America and their families were drug addicts and psycho military people. My dad had just died and my early teenage years were full of my own family trauma. I'd never been able to relate to the kids in my school and for the first time in my life I finally felt like I was accepted somewhere. I related to the punks more than any people I'd ever known. For the first time in my life I learned about what it was like to have a real community around who looked after each other.

So this is what happened: I stopped going to school and I started hanging out in this place called Tompkins Square Park. The scene on the streets back then was a real mix of kids coming from out of town who were out on their own surviving and kids like me who were still in high school and living at home but just had fucked up or complicated lives we needed to get away from. We were a pretty tight knit group, us punks, we created a family together and built community out of the scraps and fragments of all our life experiences as alienated teenagers, us against the world. I started to unlearn a lot of the TV programming I'd been fed about social interaction and started to learn how to really relate to other people. Finally some of us misfits had found a tribe outside the mainstream. We had our own culture that strived to have nothing to do with the larger popular culture.

Music was a really big part of the scene we created. We'd put on our own shows and had our own spaces to play music. We had our own underground networks for distributing our demo tapes and little magazines with stories pouring out our souls to each other about our lives. There was a real emphasis in those days on self-sufficient culture. "Do It Yourself" was the rallying cry for so many of us fed up with the overprocessed blood-soaked consumer culture and the vapid corporate madness we'd been raised with as children. Independent record labels popped up all over the place. "Selling out" the scene was a big part of the dialogue back in those days. I remember there was an album that came out called in Europe called "Only Stupid Bastards Help EMI." Because all the major record labels were huge conglomerates affiliated with arms contractors, there was a real consciousness in keeping the music within the scene, not letting the profit slip away into someone else's pocket. Making any kind of money off your art was seen as selling out to us and at the time that had its really good sides.

Everything was really informal and down to earth. There were no managers or big labels at all. If there was a band from out of town that I liked, chances were that I could write them a letter and they would write me back inviting me to come sleep on their couch and give me a personal tour of their town. When I saw bands play at the squat shows and I danced in the pit with my friends, I felt like I was part of something really cool, something that I'd helped to create that had nothing to do with mainstream society.

I think for a lot of us what eventually grew out of our alienation from society was a hyper-awareness of injustice in the world. Even if you were white the cops treated you just as bad as the black kids if you were on the street dirty and punk. Everything looked ugly at fifteen anyway: life was short and we were all gonna die young. It was the tail end of the Cold War and we'd been raised with the threat of nuclear annihilation present in the backs of all our minds. We hated society and at the same time that we hated society, a lot of us felt a really strong affinity with animals that was stronger than our feelings for humans. It was a lot easier to feel emotions for imprisoned veal calves and cats with their heads cut open in vivisection laboratories than the people that were fighting wars against each other all over the planet. A lot of us didn't eat any animal products at all and if you don't know from personal experience, it can be pretty alienating to be a vegan in a meat culture — everyone's really threatened and thinks you're crazy. Try it for a little while and you'll see what I'm talking about. Go to a diner and try ordering some food with no milk or eggs or anything fried in animal fat.

Me and my friends would just get tighter and tighter as we slipped more and more outside the norms of society. We built our world underground and a lot of our codes of ethics were things that most people wouldn't even be able to begin to understand unless they hung out with us for a long time. Most of our fashion statements were really just for each other: the obscure band names on our tee-shirts or the cryptic symbols on our canvas patches we'd used to hold our clothes together. But we had community: we'd smash TV's and cook food in big groups, we'd hang out on the streets and play music and drink a lot.

Eventually some of us became more overtly political. We hooked into older activist networks and started organizing in our schools and on the street. We got our inspiration from the old Yippies who would sit around smoking pot and telling stories about the good old days of guerrilla theater pranks and we'd have meetings in an old pacifist resource center in the neighborhood that was full of anti-nuclear activists. There were lots of older housing activists and squatters floating around who'd been the ones to originally open the abandoned buildings in the late 70's and they'd had years of experience fighting the city.

Back in the late 80's New York City was a trip and a half, let me tell you: for the first time since the 1930's there were homeless people everywhere, shanty towns in the middle of Manhattan island — the after effects of a housing crisis and Reagan cutting all the mental hospital funding and social services back at the beginning of his reign in office. The Lower East Side, our beautiful neighborhood, was going through a huge and complicated economic battle between the forces of gentrification development and everyone else: everyone from the old Puerto Ricans and Ukrainians to the young artists and the anarchists were mixed up in it.

There were big riots in Tompkins Park over the tent city that had been constructed by a small army of homeless people and their supporters. I watched as friends of mine got beat bloody over nothing in the middle of police riots. I threw my first brick at a cop and set my first barricade on fire in the middle of the street. I'd get arrested all the time in skirmishes with the police and my mom would freak out. So much of our politics were reactionary, just channeled adolescent anger fueling direct actions of our rage against society. Late night stencil bombing and window smashing, blowing up cars with M-80's, always focusing our anger against the police who were all seemingly these fat mustached buffoons who lived on Long Island and were like an occupying army in our neighborhood. But there truly was love and inspiration behind all that rage and anger. I remember it really well. A lot of us had this vision of a new society where everyone was free and equal and had autonomy from the outside government. Admittedly, as an young teenager in the middle of the city it was pretty hard to articulate sustainable models for alternative futures and practical ways to live cooperatively on large scales.

But more important than our far off visions for a new society, we really did have community that stretched across the world: scenes of punks all over the country with similar ideas and styles; comrades we'd hear of in Europe who were battling Thatcher's reactionary government, the Poll Tax Riots, the thriving West German Autonomen scene with their romantic black blocks and whole occupied neighborhoods. We listened to old punk records that told us of our history, all shrouded in legends and mysteries, but so much more accessible and less alienating than whatever pop star crap that was playing on the radio that might as well have come from another planet.

Meanwhile, we had so much more fun than everyone else. We were the punks. We dyed our hair all different colors and wrote our opinions about the world on the backs of our jackets in spikes for everyone to see in crude slogans. We pulled off a subtle yet somehow very appealing mix of not giving a fuck but caring a whole lot at the same time. We didn't have to conform to the same gender rules that everyone else seemed forced into about dating and male/female division of sex roles. For teenagers, we were really super aware and conscious of sexism in our scene. For the first time in my life I started to meet really cool real girls who would school me in political theory and teach me how to make stencils, girls who didn't shave their legs and would throw bottles at cops when they were angry. I'd found my crew.

There was this great album that a lot of us listened to back then called: "Pictures of Starving Children Sell Records: Charity, Starvation, and Rock & Roll" and it was by this really cool punk band from the UK called Chumbawamba. A bunch of us used to hang out at Michelle and Isa Moscovitz's house, (the infamous Brooklyn punk sisters), and dance around to it and cook big vegan feasts. It had come out right about the era of Live Aid and it was this incredible critique of the corporate rock structure and the hypocrisy of all the stars who profited off their image as caring about the poor. But it was so much more. It beautifully and simply articulated the destructive relationship between the rich nations and the developing world, the history of imperialism, the evils of apartheid, the corporate media, and the rich families who perpetuated it all. It was like a punk rock opera. From the first lines: "I'm the boss of the company - and I've got hunger working for me. Listen, and you'll begin to understand: I build my profits from stolen land. It's the economics of supply and demand. And I make the demands around here."

to the last lines of the album: "And the cycle of hungry children will keep on going round... Till we burn the multinationals to the ground." I still get chills when I think about it. It wasn't like any other punk album that had ever come out: the distorted guitars, chaotic drum beats, and screaming vocals had been replaced by keyboards, drum machines, and melodic intelligible lyrics. But that didn't matter at all, this was obviously a very punk album. We all loved it, we all knew all the words. We used to joke that if we ever wanted the anarchists to infiltrate mainstream society we'd just get them to start broadcasting Chumbawamba on the radio. Ha-ha.

Time flies. All of a sudden it's eight years later. My friends that I used to hang out with on the street and in the political meetings are scattered all over the place. If you look at all of us now and check out our lives, we're doing a really wide spectrum of things. There's still a lot of us doing radical activism on one front or another: organizing protests and collectives, working with pirate radio and alternative media projects; traveling through the network of infoshops and radical houses around the country, cooking Food Not Bombs and bridging connections. You can find some of my friends off doing eco-activism in the forests of the Pacific Northwest and Northern California, keeping the last of the old growth trees from getting clearcut. Some of my friends do jail support work in groups like Prisoners Literature Project that send books and letters to incarcerated inmates all over the country. Some of my friends are off in the jungle in Mexico working with the Zapatistas or doing solidarity work with 3rd world rebel movements back in our home towns. Some of my friends work in bicycle shops and teach kids how to build bikes or help organize Critical Mass rides that protest the car culture in large cities. Some of them work in food co-ops and have studied herbal medicine and natural healing to help provide alternatives to the medical industry drug culture. The ones that stayed squatting the tenement buildings on the Lower East Side by now are either master carpenters, total alcoholics, or some twisted combination of the two.

A lot of my friends are the most creative people anywhere and I'm lucky to even know them. Off the top of my head I can think of dancers and jewelry makers and musicians and sculptors and painters and writers and freak nomad fire breathers who travel the country weaving their strange and inspiring tales. I bet if you ask any of us that are still around about those days back when we were growing up together on the Lower East Side we'll all talk about how influential and inspiring a time it was.

As for me, I ended up sticking around the anarchist scene more or less, nixed the punk thing with disgust a couple years ago when things got ugly, branched out, but I've kept my roots and my friends and I still feel like I have a big community all over the place. I travel around the country and write stories about the people I meet and stuff that happens to me. You're reading one right now by the way.

I showed up in New Orleans the other day and the old streets were alive with magic and promise. I'd been staying in a small town across Lake Pontchartrain with some friends for the past couple weeks and helping renovate a house with their step-father. I had a crumpled up piece of paper with a contact address in my pocket for one of the local squats I'd gotten from a kid I'd met back in the Summertime who'd drawn me a map of how to find his collective house when we'd met hanging out on the same piece of land in Southern Oregon. I showed up at the house and it was a really nice squatted shotgun with pirated water and a wood stove, a sculpture of twisted copper coils hooked up to a bathtub in the backyard creating a makeshift hot water shower. There was a small tight-knit crew of folks living there who all shared a love for books and radical history and a hatred of authority. There was familiar art and maps and flyers for protests and shows all over the walls. I immediately felt at home.

The Crescent Wrench bookstore was a couple blocks away and I got the grand tour. The Emma Goldman books and Spectacular Times Situationist pamphlets, the Slingshot's and Shadow's and Blast's and Love & Rage's, all the national rags. There were racks full of good zines, lonely kids pouring out their souls from all over the country captured in time on little folded pieces of paper. There was a whole library with everything from carpentry do-it-yourself books to cheesy sex guides to Howard Zinn history. Every night there was a different activity going on at the Crescent Wrench: from watching Noam Chomsky movies to book binding workshops to the night I walked in and there was a room full of people polka dancing. It was a cool little scene I'd stumbled into, almost all people from other parts of the country who'd come together to create an enclave of radical culture.

So anyway, that first day I was at the Crescent Wrench infoshop I was talking to the punk guy behind the counter, happy to be back around my own kind that I could commiserate with for a little while before I headed back to small town life across the water. I asked him: "Hey, didja hear that old band Chumbawamba made it to the top of the charts? I keep hearing them on the radio. Isn't that crazy, who woulda ever thought, huh?" He looked at me and I realized I'd struck a chord. His face got all red and he managed to sputter out: "Man, those fucking sellouts! They're such hypocrites! I can't believe they're doing exactly what they preached against all those years ago! Fucking rock star bastards selling out our culture! I was walking by Tower Records and they had their album in the window! Can you believe that? They must be so rich by now. Fucking rich rock star sellout fucking bastards making money for EMI..."

I laughed and told him I thought it was a little more complicated, but inside I could relate to his gripes. The truth is that I'm just as sick of watching the music and art I care about get coopted and bought out by big business. I freaked out when I turned the TV on one day to see that the Nike corporation had bought the rights to that old Gil-Scott Heron song "The Revolution Will Not Be Televised" and was using it to sell their fucking sneakers. It was like Whitey using his own anti-manifesto with the meaning sucked out and spit back evil. It was some sick voodoo shit, insidious exploitation of black kids in the ghetto too young to remember the song had originally been a call to smash the consumer culture of the early 70's.

Even more, the whole "punk explosion" in the media a couple years ago was enough to make any self-respecting older punk kid slip into an identity crisis. It was like everything you thought had meant something had just had all the meaning drained out of it when those videos with the guys with mohawks started playing on MTV. It's undeniably strange when the stuff that you and your friends used to treasure like secrets is suddenly in the public domain. The music that got you through adolescence with its caustic critiques of pop culture is suddenly being sold as the same pop culture you were rebelling from in the first place. It's even stranger when you start seeing all these kids walking around who look just like you and your friends did and you want to be able to relate to them, but they're nothing like how you and your friends were. They're like the equivalent of hippies in the 80's: shallow retro fashion victims with so little political consciousness you could rub the contradictions in their face and they'd pay you to do it some more, cynical and hopeless. Back at the Crescent Wrench I found myself struck with how much I could relate to this guys angry ramblings.

Anyway, it was a couple days later, I was back at my friends place across the water, and I still couldn't get all this stuff off of my mind. By chance I'd been listening to the radio and I'd heard an announcement that if I was the 104 caller I'd win free tickets to see Chumbawamba live in concert. It was too surreal, too close to home. I suddenly felt betrayed. I kept getting visions of drunk frat boys singing along to poppy vapid feel good songs and record executives sitting in some office cashing in with big grins. The strange thing was that I was positive Chumbawamba knew exactly what they were doing. They were talking about it years ago, they were the ones who articulated it to me in the first place, shit. Something didn't seem right. This called for some drastic action.

So I went to go buy their CD at the mall, it was really the only thing I could do given the circumstances. I was standing on line at the Circuit City in the big Louisiana Shopping Center with my friend Kaia and it was the weekend right after Thanksgiving and everyone was busy rushing around doing their Christmas shopping. It was a total fucking nightmare. There was a wall with 40 television screens all playing the same droning images of war and sex: explosions and scantily clad bodies on beaches. There were all these kids standing transfixed before the flickering images and running around begging their parents to buy them the new super-hype video games and CD-Roms.

I was standing there on line with the glossy shrink wrapped CD in my sweaty hand and I was studying it for any kind of signifier that the contents were more radical than they appeared in their slick green and pink neon packaging. The only thing I could see that had any promise was a little note in the bottom right hand corner: "www.chumba.com," an invitation to check out their web-page on the Internet.

Times have really been changing in the last couple years and it seems like now everyone and their mom has a website on the Internet. A bunch of my neo-luddite forest friends still think it's a conspiracy to suck our brains out our skulls for the Man, but the more I learn about the potential communication capabilities of the Internet and the longer it's around, the more open minded I become. Unlike television, which is just straight blasts of commercial garbage injected straight into our brains, the net is full of radical information that's really easy to access and sift through. Because it's getting so much cheaper to use and because the medium is inherently interactive, I'm totally convinced that it's going to be a positive tool for large sections of the population. Not like there aren't forty on-line reactionary business web pages for every cool on-line lefty labor journal or radical bulletin board. There are. But the more people that get on there, the more the scales will tip. I've recently been turned into somewhat of a computer geek. I'm typing on one right now so maybe I'm a little biased, maybe my brain's already been sucked out. But anyway, keep reading and you'll see what I'm getting at.

We got back to the house and I walked straight over to the computer, turned on the modem, and logged on-line. I typed in the web page address and the screen flickered for a second and then came up full of text. I breathed a sigh of relief. Chumbawamba had links to all the cool radical websites around: Mumia-Abu Jamal, The Noam Chomsky Archive, The Liverpool Dockworkers, Anti-Fascist Action, AK Press, Billboard Altering Sites, tons of stuff I'd never even heard of. The 12 character address I found on the back of the CD and punched into a computer terminal gave me access to a wealth of information, all I had to do was click on what I wanted to know about and the screen would fill with text and photos. There was a section where there were ongoing debates about current political issues and dialogues from people all over the world asking questions to the band. They had a list of big corporate shops that they recommended stealing their new album from. "If you get caught, just tell the store detective that you have full support of the band." I was pretty happy. I don't care that EMI is a weapons contractor. If this was selling out then I think I'm ready to sign up.

I don't think that me or most of my friends have a very easy time trying to imagine a large scale social revolution. Most of us are way too alienated from mainstream culture and even most other people to be able to begin thinking on such big levels. Most of us are covered in emotional scars and have retreated to our safe little enclaves in big cities or rural communities. A lot of our attempts at political organizing seem to end up only reaching each other because we only know how to talk to a certain kind of people.

We're still the same alienated kids who hate society and can't watch TV. That's OK. But the truth is that there are too many battle fronts to be just hanging out with each other. I still want to see the people rise up and take the power out of the hands of the big corporations and start organizing their own collectives. I want to see a social revolution on a mass scale in my lifetime. Building a mass movement and educating large groups of people seems like really good places to start. But it's easier said than done. I commend anyone that's trying.

So what I'm trying to say is that if it means Chumbawamba starts selling what appear to be apolitical songs that become smash hits and millions of people listen to them and then maybe at some point have the chance of getting exposed to more radical stuff, I think that's wonderful. I'm still the same alienated kid I was at 14 who scoffs at popular culture and has some separatist tendencies and still knee jerk recoils at the general amount of stupidity and sexism and racism and brainwashed TV Christian moralist bullshit most people have been inundated with. I always feel like my soul is dying when I'm surrounded by corporate culture: office buildings, strip malls and tract suburbs. I always have to be able to retreat back to the familiar world of my friends who totally opt out of the system and live in the middle of the woods or scam their way through life in the cities living off the grid. I'm totally inspired by the freedom of radical environments that can be created out of the clutches of the law.

But the older I get the more I realize that the last thing I want to do is put myself in a bubble and surround myself with people who think just like me. That's too easy. I'm not going to scoff at all my friends who do it because I totally understand, but I'm beginning to understand that if we really want to change the world and make things better for people other than our network of friends, it takes a way more challenging type of organizing, learning how to talk to people we'd never figured we'd find ourselves talking to, thinking about things on a large scale, on a mass scale.

I used to see the future in creating a new system and a threat by example from the ashes of the old. But the truth is that I don't see the old system going anywhere yet. I think at a certain point if we want to be effective on a mass scale we have to learn to negotiate a balance with the system. We have to learn to dance with our enemies because we know it's for the best in the long run. We have to learn to be that statue of Jesus with the Mayan idols hidden inside. And be proud of it too. The truth is that I don't give a fuck anymore about an old code of the underground scene, I'm way more interested in seeing change than I am upholding the unwritten laws. I'm not going to be greedy and say my culture's getting robbed because my friends and I can always find more secret stuff to enjoy that's not for public consumption. If they figure out some way to make money off of it then we'll just think up something else that's new.

So in the end I think back to waiting in line at the Circuit City in the shopping center, surrounded by a whitewash of corporate culture. I think of all the kids growing up in this country who weren't lucky enough like me to be born in cultural centers like New York City and are stuck in the festering nightmare that are our country's ghettos and suburbs. I think of some of those kids going out and buying the new hit CD from Chumbawamba cause they heard the catchy song on the radio, making it past the surface layer and discovering a world they would have never had access to before. And I smile thinking about strange twists of fate and the unknown future in store for all of us. "Revolution will be built on the spread of ideas and information, on reaching people, rather than on our habit of creating ghettos within which to stagnate. It's no use standing outside shouting. We have to start kicking down the doors!" From eleven notes to first Chumbawamba single, 1985

DEALING WITH AUTHENTIC EMOTIONS IN A REPRESSIVE AUTHORITARIAN CONTROLLING SOCIETY

Hello! This is going to be a heavy column because I have some issues I am just dying to share with the world now that I have a column to speak from. So sit back, put up your feet and listen here! And I thank you in advance for taking the time to read and consider some thoughts I am about to put in front of you!

When people brake away from patterns and ways of thinking they didn't like - and grow up and define themselves differently than their parents - become punks or whatever... they can still get quite conservative when it comes to their views on children. This is because the effects of child-rearing run deep... you can still have immediate knee jerk reactions from your own upbringing - that you have to reflect upon to change. This is one of the cool things about being around children - you can learn so much about life and yourself from them.

People raised authoritatively (and we all were, in different degrees) - can embrace a new standpoint - and believe in their radical new stance: religiously and dogmatically... in a similar way to what they opposed. Alice Miller is an amazing writer. She explains (in her book; For Your Own Good - hidden cruelty in child-rearing and the roots of violence) the "repetitive compulsion that someone who hopes eventually to find a better world than the one he or she has experienced as a child in fact keeps creating instead the same undesired state of affairs."

Thus to illustrate this, I want to give some examples of what I have seen. I've seen a man that is proud to be a native american talking about he "wants to break his child's spirit". (His exact words). I have seen a man who grew up "terminally cool and punk as fuck", acting obnoxious, wearing clothes that shock society - say that may daughter shouldn't wear a frilly dress to the library for "what will the librarian say" and that the dress is inappropriately fancy and it will embarrass me (??). I've seen a redneck that breaks the rules of authority who is shocked when a neighbor told her granddaughter that "she has a mind of her own." A kinda hippie type who believes she is a strong woman who repeatedly calls her daughter a bitch when she isn't. And the list goes on and on.

Oh yes, it runs deep - and we all have them - hypocrisies of acting against our own belief code - when it comes to how we treat children. Double standards. We all wanted to be respected and should respect and honor children so we can teach them the meaning of it... so they can respect and honor themselves and others. I think the real shit comes out - upon our dealing with kids. The practical meets the theoretical. We are challenged. We have internalized our parents voice - deep inside.

For example - when my daughter was young her crying really bothered me. I thought crying meant I was a bad mother, my daughter ought to be happy, shouldn't she? It was a criticism of me. I should be the "perfect parent" (much as I was supposed to be the "perfect child" with no crying). My daughters crying made me feel stressed and uncomfortable deep inside - if she kept it up, it made me feel crazy.

Then I read an article, in (When your child drives you crazy) by Eda Leshan that said what really drives us crazy about children - is when they do stuff we weren't allowed to do as children. As I examined myself - I realized that I was encouraged not to cry as a child - and to see my Dad now - he goes crazy - "Stop it now, or I'll give you something to cry about!", for he was really forbidden to cry as a child. Not just to follow orders without any expression of discontent.

I read that crying is part of the healing process. In fact tears actually contain a stress hormone, ACTH and studies on adults have found lower blood pressure, pulse rate, and temperature in patients immediately following sessions where they cried and raged. I read this recently in an article called Understanding tears and tantrums in a paper called "Growing up in Santa Cruz". Anyone who is interested send me a SASE and I'll xerox the article for you.

Anyway, after I figured things out - I felt I could let my daughter have the right to express her own feelings without being so emotionally wrapped up in them myself. My understanding of this and dealings with her, gave her the vocabulary to even defend herself. When Clover was 3 or 4 and cried because an acquaintance ordered spicy food that Clover couldn't eat and we had no money to order our own food, the lady said; "Oh stop crying!" Clover said, "But crying helps me get my sad out!" Then he lady replied, "Oh wow, I never thought of it like that."

This is an example of why we need to think and find out how to raise children - if we feel we want to raise them differently than how we were raised. Once I understood what was going on logically, it really did help me emotionally to give Clover more space to have her own emotions. Sometimes it's better to just let your kid cry without you getting freaked on top of it. Sometimes people need to cry for a bit before you can make them feel better. (Or cry as you comfort them, of just have their sadness validated. "Yes, that really sucks!", instead of denied "Oh, it's not so bad" - to be able to grieve and bounce back. Gypsy told me she would tell Thor to go cry to a tree so he wouldn't bother the people they were crashing with. That's a lot better than telling him not to cry. Important note: I'm not advocating not comforting children or not listening to why children are upset and trying to help. I am talking about situations where nothing you can do is gonna help, and it's an older child not a baby, and you feel kinda mad at the child, like it has no right to cry about what it's crying about and the child isn't asking for your comfort... it just wants to cry cuz it's sad! I am also not talking to people who have no empathy for a child's tears and are ignoring them... I am talking for the people who have too much empathy and want to make stuff better all the time or to people who get angry at crying children.

Part of life is being sad, ya know? And if we forbid crying and other "negative" emotions and behaviors in children... you know what happens... we also suppress their ability for "positive" emotions - cuz restraining your authentic spontaneous feelings seems to work both ways. It's this ying yang thing, you close your heart so you won't get hurt anymore and you find you're not really open to feel all the good things either. And that's not worth it, to repress a child's ability for spontaneous joy and honesty because it is so well behaved. Soon enough the child will learn more self control.

Pain and mental pain is usually indication you are being hurt! And you need to listen to that, not blame yourself, ask yourself what's wrong! Listen to the young, believe them when they tell you what is wrong. Don't try to tell them, they don't feel what they feel and just blow them off! I believe my daughter when she tells me somebody's parents are mean or what the teacher did, or what I did. I listen to her and believe her. But sometimes I can just not handle her pain, or fix it, or know a solution. And when you don't know what to do, you can at least be honest, that's always helpful, just be honest. I'm certainly not a perfect person, my god no! I can be horrible and the parent child relationship is fraught with tensions... but honestly and respect and help you navigate through confusion. So I'm just saying I learned how to let her cry without feeling as crazy. And really I learned, if you want organic kids they are going to have a few bugs. But is there really another way? I can't imagine trying to control her like that. But this could get into another whole deep subject. To stay focused, I'll get back to the subject.

Did you ever see the episode of the Simpsons where Lisa is real bummed and Marge tells her to just smile and put on her happy face and Lisa gets out of the car to go to school with the fake smile and Marge thinks about it and freaks and grabs her and said "No, I'm sorry Lisa, you can be yourself, you can be sad, it's alright." Then she asks Lisa why she's smiling and Lisa says "Cuz now I do feel happy mom. That was really cool".

Our society is supposed to be of the people but it's really so compulsory and controlled and afraid of free choice - especially in relation to children who are punished, hit, imprisoned, and sent to psychologists if they don't obey authority. Remember... "You can't say Yes with all your heart, if you can't also have the choice to say No." —John Holt.

As an anarchist parent, when I talk of dealing with tension, I do differentiate between the stress of having somebody's foot on your throat (oppression), unhealthy societal expectations (mental slavery) and the trials and tribulations inherent in living (frustration, sadness, heartbreak, natural disasters, death, etc.). You do what you can do, I like to have a more political understanding of the life at hand... but has sometimes life just sucks! And we have to learn how to deal with our own existence. Talking about problems can help.

Now I want to talk about crying babies which is different, for a crying baby should always be picked up and never left to cry. And babies cry a lot more than us bigger people cuz they are so outright with everything and it can be disconcerting. For this topic, I am going to refer to Sheila Kitzinger's book, The Crying Baby. It is the shit! Very good advice. Go get it, at the library or look in the phone book for the Le Leche League phone # for they might have it in their library (that's where Faith got it).

I will quickly run down some points for harried parents to glean from on the topic of Crying Babies. 1) Many babies have dairy intolerance. Thus you as a nursing mom eating dairy could be giving your baby colic. This was true in my case, as dairy intolerance was big part of Clover's colic and I didn't know it for months.

2) There are studies done that prove there is no correlation between material emotional factors and a baby's crying. Yes a neurotic or young or dumb mother who drank coffee when pregnant has the same amount of odds as having a crying baby or a contented baby, so don't feel guilty ya'll, you are not defective! (And since so many people make you feel like you are, isn't it nice to know?)

3) Sometimes colicky babies cry and reject the breast. Stressful. But switching to bottle feeding will not make it better. They are getting fine nutrition by nursing.

And by the way, compared to other mammals, human women have the most dilute milk of all. Human babies are often like bear cubs, who suckle almost non-stop. So they are meant to nurse a lot, and formula is more heavy and filling than breast milk so they need less but still need to fulfill their sucking needs which are not just for hunger.

4) A normal baby is power-packed, amazing energy, piercing screams, demanding not like that soft compliant cooing Gerber baby you saw in the commercials, OK?

5) Babies with obvious pain have to be picked up, cuddled, soothed, rocked etc. It is worrisome when others tell you that you are spoiling your baby. There is no such thing!

6) Babies get flustered and cry to release pain and feel better afterwards. 7) Babies are confronted with adults ideas of them, and attempts to control them. Sometimes care-givers are fairly relaxed and allow babies to do more or less what they want to do. In some third world cultures, adults accept small babies as they are without trying to mold their behavior on the grounds they are not ready yet. They have a relaxed attitude about potty training and nudity. No family member would think of deliberately frustrating a baby in order to teach it anything.

In our culture - we try to domesticate babies. Put them to bed, isolated from human contact and expect them to sleep. Bath, dress, and parade them

- expecting them to smile and make us proud. Read parenting books about how long they should sleep. But babies work on inner biological drives and can be frustrated by our attempts to mold them. When things don't work - we think something is wrong with us or the baby. And we try to change the babies behavior and start a battle. Some tensions are culturally imposed.

8) The babies in other cultures chapter of this book kicked ass! It's so fascinating! I love reading how people from around the world do things. One big bit of information is almost everybody carries their baby, with a sling or something to get somebody else to carry the baby. The baby sleeps while carried, and gets to look at all the action in the world, like the motion, and the skin contact by being close to the human heartbeat. When babies cry to be picked up, that's cuz they should be - like little monkey! They'll get independent soon enough and start running away... beginning with enough security leads to independence down the road. Why don't we listen to our kids? Cuz later when they want independence, that's when our culture tries to over-mother them and "hold" them back.

Other cultures seem to be more fond and used to their children, I do believe, not isolating mother like how we do here. "Our society puts motherhood on a pedestal while disparaging and degrading mothers in practice."

She says she doesn't think we could culturally deal with nursing our babies for three years, sleeping with them in our beds, and letting them go to sleep when they want. I dunno. I don't think it was that shocking to do so. But then I raised Clover at that age on the west coast and had some wild women for friends, hippies and punks. Babies on the tit, running wild and sleeping at shows and cafes was all I ever saw. And my mom friends were all cute and interesting and attracting so they had clout plus we weren't stuck in a big industrialized city or out in the suburbs. Still life was stressful and hard. I just had people to be role models and to talk to... although I had to look for them. It seems harder for Faith, surrounded by what I call the "normal" icky people.

I prefer to raise the little ones like barbarians, let them get in the mud, go up to people, pee in the bushes, sit on the sidewalk and nurse them, that's just me. A lot of people enjoyed my wild child's company. Will they turn into brats? I wondered that too, you want them to keep their spirit and self-esteem. I can tell you now at 10 my daughter is a somewhat shy, big hearted, respectable, creative and pretty damn civilized creature. Life happens to you, you don't have to worry about that. But remember us anarchists like liberty, freedom not license, I mean you got to respect other people's rights too! Just cuz we mostly are into working together and equality instead of a master and servant, under and over type arrangement doesn't mean we have no responsibility. I didn't raise her to be a creep. Somehow she turned out very "well-behaved" at a young age anyway, like the only toddler sitting calmly at the library reading hour. (But she hadn't been calm that would be okay too - maybe they I would have taken her to the park). And I raised her like a heathen! It was fun, I have no regrets about that time in our lives. I mean little kids are pretty punk, just naturally.

ZINE REVIEWS

 REVIEWS BY CHRIS(TINE) WITH HELP FROM APRILLE & RYAN WHERE NOTED.

101 CONTRADICTIONS IN THE BIBLE ($2ppd to Angus McIlwraith PO Box 34027 Scotia Sq RPO Halifax, NS, B3J3S1, Canada) The title says it all. If you're looking for arguments to disprove those who cite the bible as absolute truth, this is what you want. Its also fun to read, especially if you went to Catholic school. (-Ryan)

A DIFFERENT KIND OF GREATNESS #3 ($2/P.O. Box 7172/Rockford IL 61126-7172) Interviews with Mulligan Stu, Nil 8, and Basket Case. Reviews, poetry and columns. It's all done in a bland computer format which always reminds me of those horrible indie band promo sheets. Didn't really keep me interested. (-Aprille)

A PUNK KID WALKS INTO A BAR... #11 ($1ppd to PO Box 254 Rye, NY 10580 USA) APKWIAB is quickly becoming one of my favorite zines. This is the second issue I've read and without a doubt this issue has proven that the quality of the last issue was not a fluke. Barclay, the hamster lovin' editor, packs this issue with witty observations, much of it relating to language, that made me laugh out loud on a number of occasions. I've seen a lot of good reviews for this zine; they are all deserved. Even the record reviews are funny. You can't beat that. Great Job. (-Ryan)

AMMUNITION #1 ($1/152 Oliver Rd./New Haven CT 06515) I loved the cover of this so I was lured into reading the personal escapades within. Reminded me of a lot of Nowhere Fast. It's stories of traveling, drinking, sharing moments with friends and the like. It's got a nice personable flow to it. I wasn't completely captivated the entire time, but I did enjoy this one.

AMSTERDAM CHRONICLE #4 ($5ppd to G. Hogan Kanaalstraat 66-huis 1054 XK Amsterdam, Netherlands) I've been reading a lot of International zines recently and I can't get over how much people from outside the United States know about our history. So, how is it that we know so little about theirs? Onto the review.... Amsterdam Chronicle is a thick anti-authoritarian zine. This issue looks at how the Dutch authorities have increased the right of the police to use surveillance as a means cracking down on "marginal groups": (eg.) foreigners and the homeless. All the while portraying themselves as doing what's best for the society, but in reality enforcing a fascist policy. Superbly researched and well documented the articles gives the reader a glimpse of the direction more and more governments are heading. Excellent. (-Ryan)

ANTI-PATHY #3 ($1ppd/ PO Box 11703/ Eugene OR 97440) I have literally carried this and Antipathy #2 around for months cause this is an awesome zine packed full of good articles and since it appeals to me so much and there is literally hours of worth of reading it's taken me a long time to get through it. Sometimes it bums me out that the zines I like the best and want to recommend the most take the longest to read and often get reviewed late. Antipathy #3 is a bit smaller than issue #2, but has a tons of great articles. I like Mike's attitude cause it goes way beyond the verbatim rhetoric of the norm on a PC political zine. Mike delves deeper, brings experience and thought to the issues and challenges you to think. He shares experiences traveling through Mexico, male prostitution, veganism, sexuality, nature, hardcore, punk and straight edge. This has some of the elements that I liked so much about Fucktooth — that politics, sex issues and music blend that all goes into new territory. This zine absolutely rocks and once I got delved into it I couldn't let it go. Totally recommended! It's so rad to read something that I can relate that goes beyond the surface. Rad!

APPLE BROWN BETTY #6 ($1/P.O. Box 245/Montvale NJ 07645) Bits about Mad Agent Records, running track in school, overheard conversations at school, news about a punk kid who was beat to death in Amarillo TX. Interview with Alan from Pop Kid Records. Show, music, and zine reviews. If you're into power pop this zine for you. (-Aprille)

BABBLE ON #5 ($1 and 2 stamps to 417 Westwood Ln. Rochester, IN 46975 USA) I must admit that this didn't interest me. It wasn't bad, just not what I'm interested in. If zines reflect the personal tastes of the writers (and they should!), then some zines are less subtle about it than others. This is one of them. This issue has an interview with Gary Barker, a comic artist that has worked on Garfield and a some Marvel and D.C. titles. Groovy Man from My Life With The Thrillkill Kult, and Hanzel and Gretel. The rest is a mixed bag of articles that range from dream interpretation to studio wrestling. (-Ryan)

CHUMPIRE #95 (1 stamp to PO Box 680 Conneaut Lake, PA 16316-0680 USA) I don't think this is the latest installment, but you can ask for the most current. For long as I can remember Chumpire has been a sheet of paper crammed full of Greg's observations about punk rock and life. I've gotten to know Greg a little in the past few years and I have a lot of respect for him. Each time I read Chumpire I feel I know him a little better. This is really a great example of do-it-yourself communication within punk rock. (-Ryan)

CIMABUE FANZINE #7 (Free to 6 Kings Crossing Apt D Cockeysville, MD 21030 USA) This is the second issue I've reviewed and it's a lot like the first issue... a lot of Ska. Interviews with The Scofflaws, The Robustos, The Decepticonz, and Skaliotis. Ska show reviews, ska record reviews, and more ska than you can shake a stick at fill out this issue. If you like ska then you'll love Cimabue Fanzine. It keeps you up to date on the latest Ska flavors. (-Ryan)

COUNTERCULTURE #1 (stamps or donation/ PO Box 73/ Odenton MD 21113) A new project started up by the Anarcho Punk Federation. A newspaper put out seasonally that acts as an open forum for news, info, essays, and articles concerning punk activism. Each issue will also feature an article on anarchist history. This issue features The Paris Commune of 1871, a short but inspiring point in history. There's a listing of worldwide contacts, as well as info on events happening this summer. What I really liked is it's packed with addresses of people, groups, organizations, and such to get a hold of. Help support projects like this. (-Aprille)

CRYPTIC SLAUGHTER #8 ($1ppd/PO Box 1781/Spokane WA 99210) This zine has got to be about the best thing in Eastern Washington cause every time I get my hands on it I love it. Great interviews with Boy Sets Fire, Converge and Unruh give this good musical ground coverage. Giovanni's writing about traveling in Europe, having mental illness and struggling with medication, Food Not Bombs, bio-engineered food and some other bits give this personality and character as well as dealing with interesting subjects. It was all awesome to read which makes this zine rock!!

DECADES OF CONFUSION FEED THE INSECT #19 (May 98) ($2/224 North Camac St/Philadelphia PA 19107) This is an artistic zine that is mostly with artwork (drawings) of a goth-tribal-sexual sort. The spare words didn't make any sense to me but I like the overall aesthetic.

DEFENSTRATOR #6 (??? to the Defenstrator c/o A-Space 4722 Baltimore Ave. Philadelphia, PA 19143) I think it is only a matter of time before every major city has a something like the Defenstrator. Each time I get a package of zines to review there is an anarchist news paper or two inside. And each one is from a different city. This time it's from Philadelphia's long running A-Space. As far as format and subject this is pretty standard. A lot of attention is given to regional issues. But there is a good deal of international coverage here too. If they are able to keep a regular schedule this could be a great tool for keeping people informed on current events. Great Job. (-Ryan)

EYE CANDY #5 ($1/c/o Joseph Biel/7741 Ohio St/Mentor OH 44060) A pretty straightforward zine. Interview w/Racer Ten, Dr. Bob's Nightmare and The Assmen. Various articles on getting a job at Subway, starting a fire with a wall socket, the insane clown posse, good and bad points of MRR plus reviews. The page about reasons to ride a bike was funny - but still has legitimate reasons. Also a short but to the point bit about being aware of where your money goes. The back page had a list of different issues of Eyecandy and it went up to #7, so this is a pretty old issue. (-Aprille)

FRACTURE #2 ($2ppd/PO Box 623/ Cardiff CF3 9ZA Wales UK) A good newsprint zine that is free in the UK (but $2 overseas). Interviews w/Discount, Knuckledust (UK-HC), Dagobah, Burnside (UK) and Servotron plus a record label profile on London's Household Name Records. There are a lot of reviews and a good section of columns, however I was disappointed that none of the columns really held my attention or interest. None the less a well done zine with good intentions.

FSHUT STONCA #4 (Rafal Grodzicki/Sloneczna 79/38-200 Jasio/Poland) This is a well done zine with good layouts all in Poland. It seems to cover the crust-punk scene, though I've never heard of the bands interviewed: Refuse, Karma, Regiment... there's a bunch more. Unfortunately it's pretty hard to say much about it cause I can't read it. There's a lot of text though - and it looks good.

GLUTTON FOR PUNKISHMENT #3 ($1/Reese Ikler/PO Box 15295/SF CA 94115) The writing in this zine seems to be in the vein of shock or outrage value. Trying to write things that will annoy people. Articles on what men want, Chumbawamba deserving all the benefits of a major label, a break down of all the different labels used to describe punk music, different rants by Karyn Abrasive, interviews with Skatologists, Light Saber Fighter tour diary, letters and poetry. Didn't do much for me. (-Aprille)

GOING NOWHERE #5 ($1ppd to 7078 Van Gordon Ct. Arvada, CO 80004 USA) Without a doubt, I'd have to say I'm reminded of an early issue of Punk Planet, which was very similar to MRR. With Punk Planet it took time, but they eventually developed there own style. I think the same will happen for this zine. Inside this issue are interviews with Propagandhi and Millencolin. There are also a handful of columns and reviews (of zines, records, and films). Two instructional articles were dedicated to starting your own zine and silk-screening. It's good to see people sharing information and passing on DIY ideas. My only complaint is that there are too many ads. Unfortunately it costs money to publish a zine and they are a necessity in most cases. (-Ryan)

ZINES ZINES

Prospect Park, PA 19076-1307 USA) Groundswell is excellent. I was fortunate enough to get three consecutive issues which allowed me to get a solid impression of this project's scope. Groundswell, "a monthly almanac of anti-authoritarian views", promotes radical politics through interviews, articles, and poetry. Issues 10 and 11 contain an interview with Roger Leisner, the founder of Radio Free Maine, and an extensive article that traces the origins of the authoritarianism in grammar, runs throughout all three issues. Each issue is loaded with well written articles; you'll definitely learn something. (-Ryan)

GUMSHOE #1 (2 stamps/5500 Prytania St. Box #133/ New Orleans LA 70115) Done on 8 pages of newsprint S&L style this is a good first effort. There's some personality showing through in between the Gameface and Dead Beat Records interviews. Sarcastic coverage of the KKK (and anti) rally in Pittsburgh, a rant on baggy pants. Reviews. And a story about moving from Pensacola to New Orleans.

GUTTURAL RESPONSE #3 ($1ppd in Can/US. $2 World to Guttural Response 13 Earleton Ave. Dartmouth N.S. B2Y 2A6, Canada) This is another first for me. This issue focuses heavily on the noisier and more metal sounding side of hardcore. Interviews with Enemy Soil, JAWW, Negative Trend, and others. The interviews don't go into too much detail but give a general overview of the band and their opinions. Also included are columns on a variety of issues, from CD's to Cannabis to fashion trends. This is pretty typical as far as zines go; in time I think it will develop its own characteristics. Good effort! (-Ryan)

HODGEPODGE #4 ($2ppd/Mike Schade/983 Little Neck Ave./N. Bellmore NY 11710) When I get really into a zine, or really moved by a zine—I feel the strong urge to rant and rave about it. This is one of the best zines I've read. I loved the fact that there is a huge section of columns which were all totally great! I was completely captivated through them all, which is unfortunately a rare thing. I enjoyed Mike's personal introduction and the way he shared his mind-set on doing this zine: the rewards and the frustration. It set a good tone—and lured me in completely. The columns as I said were great and all well written. I was particularly moved by two columns by twin brothers about discovering they had aneurysms. I was totally moved by the way they shared the experiences of living through this ordeal. Honestly it was one of the best and most impressive things I think I've ever read! There is also an awesome interview with Martin from Los Crudos who as always has so many good things to say and provides so much inspiration! Less interesting to me were the interviews with Jason Farrell (from Bluetip & Sweetbelly Freakdown) and Alex Dunham (Regulator Watts and ex-Hoover) - mostly just cause I'm not into nor familiar with these bands. There are also good articles on Dioxin and Shell Oil Company. And a ton of reviews. What really lices the cake is that the layouts are great with a very eloquent style that is eye-pleasing and easy to follow without being heavy handed. Rad zine - very highly recommended!!

I'M JOHNNY AND I DON'T GIVE A FUCK FANZINE #8 ($3ppd/PO Box 21533-1850 Commercial Dr./Vancouver BC V5N 4A0 Canada) This zine wins hands down as being my favorite zine right now! The cover absolutely rocks and lures me in; the hand-writing style is legible with a personable flair; the 1/4 sized format makes this fat little book fit right into your pocket so you can read it anywhere. And most important this reads like your favorite book that you can't bear to put down. Andy tells a narrative story of a year or so in his life, a long time ago, when he was young and punk and drunk most of the time. It's about living here and there, traveling from place to place, falling in love, meeting new friends, with a heavy dose of the stupidity of alcoholism and the utter gutter-like life of punk houses. All of those simple yet big things in life. This is like a brother to Cometbus. Cometbus comparisons gets made all the time, and in fact become boring. But both zines are favorites of mine for the bottom line factor that they tell a good compelling story—and though that may sound simple and easy it's obviously not as many many zines have proven. Yep... "I'm Johnny" rocks for all of these reasons and wins my favorite zine award this month!!!!

INCREDIBLE INQUIRY ($1 Al Fry 153 Village Circle/Garden Valley ID 83622) This guy puts together both catalogs and collections of his writing which are mostly misc. tid-bits on everything from eating well to living free to getting on over on the system. It's all in here. He's a pretty eccentric guy with a vast knowledge of the world and if you are interested in living an alternative lifestyle you've got to cross paths with this guy in one way or another just to find out what he's got to offer in his library. Tons of booklets, books and videos are only the beginning.

INFILTRATION #8 ($1/PO Box 6609/Town Centre/Pickering Ontario/L1V 6P7

Canada) I love the idea behind this zine! It's all about going places you're not supposed to, as far as restricted areas or secret passageways in cities go. If there was info like this around for every town - it would be great. If you were traveling around, you'd know about hidden spots as well as some local history. This issue focuses on City Hall, Metro Hall and the 19th floor of the Royal York Hotel - all in Toronto. The vast amount of history the editor knows about these places is in itself impressive. As well as his ability to bullshit his way around trouble when confronted by security/employees in off limit areas. There's a floor by floor breakdown of both City and Metro Hall - from basement to observation deck. He also writes about finally getting to the mysterious 19th Floor of the swanky Royal York Hotel. With a lot of the tips he gives you'll soon be ducking behind all those "employee only" doors you come across. (-Aprille)

INTERNATIONAL STRAIGHT EDGE BULLETIN #28 ($3ppd world to Y.Boislev, BP 7523, 35075 Rennes Cedex 3, France) An incredible resource for anyone interested in the international straight-edge scene. Loaded with scene reports, interviews, and reviews, as well as columns and articles from across the globe. You have to respect the effort that goes into coordinating something of this scale. This zine is huge. Highly recommended... even for the curious. (-Ryan)

JARJETON INKVISITIO ($4ppd/PO Box 152/Burton-On-Trent/Staffs/DE14 1XX/England) An amazing 7-way split zine! Includes: Why, Aversion, Ripping Thrash, Angelheart, Cat On A String, Bald Cactus, and Hell and Damnation. A great selection. Each has its own distinct style and approach, but they all focus around the D.I.Y. punk community. There's so much in this! All the editors have excellent writing styles that contain humor with strong opinions that don't come across as preachy. Views on things such as the uselessness of the Royal Family, the absurdness of Chumbawamba, similarities between militant vegans and organized religions in regards to "one view for all" attitudes, plus tons of other odds and ends. There's so many reviews of zines and records your head will be spinning. The layout is excellent as well. Get this! (-Aprille)

JUGGERNAUT #5 ($3ppd to BLK 359 Woodlands Ave. 5 #03-364 Singapore 730359 Singapore) What I think is so great about fanzines from outside the U.S. is that they really put a lot of effort into covering the international do-it-yourself community. This zine is no different. There is a substantial focus on the international hardcore scene. Interviews with The Volatiles, Ultimatum, Throwdown, and a few others. Also included are a lot of articles and news clippings relating to animal rights and other environmental issues. I enjoyed reading this a lot. You can really feel the enthusiasm that goes into making this zine. Great Job. (Bob Doom - does your contribution read a bit like Aus-Rotten lyrics or is it me? Just wondering.) (-Ryan)

MACHINE-ANIMAL COLLAGES ZINE #1 ($1/ Nicolas Lampert/PO Box 11351/Oakland CA 94611) Literally what the title suggests: collages of animal parts mixed with machine parts to create new creatures. Interesting and creepy at the same time.

MANKIND DISASTER #2+3 VITRIOL # 5.6 SPLIT ZINE (3$ c/b Mitja Rozman ul. Jana Baukarata 49240 Ljutomer/Slovenia {Mankind Disaster} or Jolanda Roskar Hajdose 43c 2251 Ptuj Slovenia {Vitriol}) What I am reviewing here are two issues of two different zines from Slovenia doing split issues with each other. I really enjoyed reading these zines. I love to have an outlook on what's going on in the punk HC scene especially in countries that get little exposure like Slovenia. I could not read everything in this zine as not all of it is in English, but even what I couldn't read I still enjoyed the pictures and what not. These zines feature some interesting artwork, and even some amusing cartoons. I also really enjoyed the bands interviewed within these pages, a sampling: Cress, Battle of Disarm, Doom, and Active Minds to name a few. The interviews are on the basic side, but are still interesting and informative. There are also some informative scene reports of Slovenia, Belgium and Finland. A highly recommended zine for anyone interested in the international hardcore community! (Beth)

MO CHEEKS FANZINE #2 ($2 W/4 stamps 321 High School Rd. #341 Bainbridge Island, WA 98110) We have interviews with Against All Authority, The Displacements, Mark Bruback, and The Nobodies, among others. Intermixed with these interviews are fairly typical columns, record reviews, and quite a few pictures. The layout and design of this zine leaves much to be desired, but when it comes down to it it's not too terrible, you can read everything at least. The interviews are all right, not terribly inspiring, but not too boring either; it would probably help if I were into any of the bands. What I really could do without is the pictures of people spreading their cheeks. I just found that sort of revolting. (Beth) else. The layout is crammed but still good and readable, and does not look sloppy, but just punk. A good read! (Beth)

THIS ANATOMY IS MUSIC #1 ($1/Jess O Rama/45 Wilder Ln/Leominster MA 01453) A little typed pocket size zine. All personal writing from inside Jess's world. Her words are very poetic and simple and you feel like you just got a great letter from a close friend. She is very perceptive of small things in life but also very aware of how fucked up the bigger picture can be. The part about how working her job is killing her creativity is something a lot of us can relate to. She also talks about her shyness and worrying about mental illness. Her mother and grandfather were both diagnosed with problems. The story about going to her mother's work (a box factory) and seeing how horrible and mundane it is was very moving. A great first issue. (-Aprille)

TOUCH THE BRUTE SCHIZOID DRUG SALAD #13 (stamps/trade/ 195 Hanson Dr/Springfield MA 01128-1021) It's really 4 different zines that fit in a half envelope. Each zine was at #13 when they decided to do this collaboration. All 4 zines are heavy on clip art collages. Touch and Drug Salad have more written word than Brute and Schizoid. Touch focuses on the absurdity of society and includes a funny cartoon about misconceptions. Drug Salad is mostly crazy clippings from newspapers and magazines. Also following the society out of control theme. Brute is the simplest in content of the group. More of a statement in form. All three styles are blended in Schizoid. Newspaper clippings, collage, written word - but again following the anti-society theme. All 4 are short issues but make up an interesting look into the minds of 4 zine editors. (-Aprille)

VAFANCULO #3 (??? to 4155 Patterson Rd. Butler, PA 16002 USA) I liked this a lot. It was very honest and without apologies. This issue is a nice mixture of music and politics that come across as very important to the editor. Inside is information about Tibet, Mumia, and an individual's rights when confronted by police. Its short, but good. (-Ryan)

VEGAN SPICE (??? to 127 Oakside Rd. SW Calgary, AB T2V 4H6 Canada) I think this is a one-shot zine. It started out as a project for an English Writing course but the editor got really excited about the whole project and here it is. This would be a really good resource for anyone looking for basic information concerning animal rights. It has a lot of definitions dealing with specific types of testing. Also included are arguments for vegetarianism and companies targeted for boycotts. I'd like to see more of these, because I remember how important they were for me years ago. Good Job! (-Ryan)

WEST SIDE #2 (2 stamps/Craig Garity/310 Jill Ave #109/Celina OH 45822) As well as a zine it's a catalog for his distro, which I always like. It combines two things I love to read. There's a lot of cool stuff in here. A tale about greed and society written in a children's/fairy tale way, a great intro about respect, steps on making improvised napalm, short page of reviews, some other odds and ends. Then the catalog that lists all the patches, pins, records, books & more they distro. An interesting little zine. The writing was very much from the heart. Wish it was longer. (-Aprille)

WEST VIRGINIA SURF REPORT #13 (??? to PO Box 7422 Burbank, CA 91510-7422 USA) What a strange name. This is a collection of short stories. Like any other collection you have your good and bad stories. This had more good than bad which was good. If you like short stories you'll like this. I really enjoyed the story about a boy who was masturbating in his father's childhood room. His fantasies started taking the shape of what were his father's from years gone by. It was funny. (-Ryan)

WHY NOT? #4 (stamps or trade/Jemuel Joseph Gardner/39275 Sutter Dr./Fremont CA 94538) A small, short, hand-written zine that reminds me more of a letter to a friend. The theme is childhood. A few short memories of the editors childhood as well as from a couple friends. (-Aprille)

ZINE GUIDE #1 ($4ppd US/$7ppd world/PO Box 5467/Evanston IL 60204) Brought to us by the folks at Tail Spins zine, this is an amazing new publication that is a very comprehensive guide to zines (with good coverage and emphasis within the world of hardcore and punk - and beyond). Every one that I thought to look up was there. What makes this rock extra hard is that not only are individual issues summarized and reviewed but there are also a whole bunch of survey's (zine editors favorites as an example) tallied under each one as well as listed at the beginning all together (favorite zines among record labels, among other zines, among females, males, and overall) ($8. came in #25!). Not only is this just plain cool, but it's interesting and gives a bit more information that just a mere review. I was also totally impressed that they list current addresses as well as old ones and just about any relevant information you could need. This rocks! This is THE resource guide to zineland!

TIRED OF FEELING LIKE A CORPORATE CHUMP YET?

Sick of paying high prices to corporate record stores & still not being able to find all the indie releases you're looking for? Well, if so, check out VERY Distribution & Mailorder. We offer over 300 different labels and specialize in hardcore & punk rock, plus we even carry indie rock, ska, and metal stuff, too. We've got a huge 120+ page catalog, offer fast, honest, & reliable service, and we even accept all major credit cards. So what's the difference between us and them, you ask? Simple. We actually give a shit & listen to a lot of the music we sell, and we don't just see indie labels as a dollar sign or a new trend. How's that old saying go? I think it goes "by the kids, for the kids". Plus we sell stuff for a hell of a lot cheaper (i.e. most full length cds are priced from $8-$12, t-shirts for $12, lps for $6-$8, etc), and we've got tons of vinyl, too. So you want to find out more? Just send us $2 (US), $3 (world) for a copy of our latest mailorder catalog. It's fully descriptive, and filled with tons of cds, vinyl, cassettes, videos, zines, clothing, stickers, & more. So break away from the corporate stranglehold they've got on you, get off your lazy generation X ass, and send a few dollars to:

MUSIC REVIEWS

ACRID/LEFT FOR DEAD - Split LP First of all this red vinyl is cut into a saw blade edge which alone makes this cool. Plus Acrid rocks! I'm addicted to them after a couple listens. Though much of this is slow and droneing heavy crossed with whirling speed — amongst that trade off are the rockin' hooks and kickin' grooves. It totally works for me! Left For Dead have more of a straight-forward hardcore-punk sound. They've got a fuzzy distorted guitar and gravelly vocals, thumping speed with some slower heavier parts. Last time I heard of 'em was a split LP with Chokehold. They're totally good and play tight, but don't leave quite as much of an impression on me as Acrid (so next time I hear Left For Dead they'll probably be a one of my favorites). Two good bands making for a good split w/ cool vinyl. (No Idea/PO Box 14636/Gainesville FL 32604-4636)

ACTITUD SUBVERSIVA - TAPE Really cool music from Puerto Rico. Melodic hardcore. Sometimes hard, sometimes metal, sometimes kinda new wave even. All lyrics in Spanish. The recording is kinda trebly, but not bad and the music makes up for it. ($6ppd/Felix/69 AS/Calle Polaris FQ-10/Irlanda Heights Bayamon/Bayamon, Puerto Rico 00956) (-Amy)
AGAINST THE GRAIN - MENTIROSO CD Straight-up NY style hardcore. Good stuff in the vein of Warzone. More hardcore than metal. (Too Damn Hype Records/PO Box 15793/Philadelphia PA 19103) (-Amy) ARMA CONTRA ARMA - LET NO ONE DECEIVE YOU 7" This band is made of some Los Crudos members, plus friends, switched around on instruments. A couple years ago when Crudos were out this way Arma Contra Arma played a few songs. Playing tight, punchy hardcore to the roots. Lyrics are in English and Spanish - sung in Spanish with a deep gravelly screaming voice. (Lengua Armada Records/2340 W. 24th St/Chicago IL 60608)

BLACKLIST S/T 7" This is fun, bouncy oi punk hailing from Denver Colorado. Although this is far from original, it is enjoyable. The production is pretty weak on the music, but the packaging is slightly above average for a release like this. Still, despite its lack of originality I still found myself wanting to bounce around while listening to this. If you're into newer oi-punk kind of stuff, this may be of interest to you. There is a bizarre description of the band included in the 7" which describes them as oi with an angry emo crunch. I don't see the "emo crunch" anywhere, but whatever. (Paco Garden Records 569 E. Colfax Box 123 Denver CO 80203 USA) (Beth)

BOILING MAN - I'D WATCH YOU DIE 7" Awesome band! Totally heavy and powerful playing old-styled straight-forward aggressive hardcore. The vocals are awesome: they're raw and gravelly while being strong and clear which give them prominence. The whole band plays totally tight giving this a powerful delivery. What is awesome about them is that while they're heavy and gruff, it's also all playing with a clean style - you can hear the vocals and it's all got really catchy hooks. Awesome!! Boiling Man is one of the best bands around! Connecticut punks! (Ice Records/PO Box 422965/SF CA 94142-2965 or Boiling Man/PO Box 158/New Haven CT 06501) ***

BONEHOUSE - DOGBITE CD Ever since I got this I've been listening to it a lot, but no descriptive words were fast to come to me. This falls in the middle of metal and hardcore with a perfect draw on both worlds. The vocals are deep, gruff and throaty with a trade off second vocalist in parts — giving it that crust punk sound. The music has distinct metallic riffs, a few leads (never out of control) and a good steady galloping tempo throughout. It's totally tight and really powerful and also really catchy! They do an awesome job of drawing influences across the board from hardcore, metal and crust punk that all blends together a totally heavy rockin style that is perfectly addictive! This is triumphant and this rules! (Earth AD Records/$14ppd ($20 for both) to Kalle Stietzel/PO Box 6028/24121 Keil Germany) ****

BONEHOUSE - SYMMETRY OF DECADENCE CD I don't like this one, which is older than Dogbite, nearly as much. While falling into the hardcore meets metal land — it's more straight forward with more emphasis on the metallic guitar leads and the vocals aren't as interesting cause it's just the main singer without the additional one of the 2nd record. I still like this band quite a bit. They do a Varukers cover on here which is pretty cool. But listening to this older release makes me inevitably compare it to the newer one and realize that they've come a long way in developing a more powerful, complex, interesting sound that is totally tight. Great band! ($14ppd ($20ppd for both) to Kalle Stietzel/PO Box 6028/24121 Keil Germany)

BOTCH - THE UNIFYING THEMES OF SEX, DEATH & RELIGION CD Well the title pretty much pins this one. Finger-pointing, soul pouring lyrics. New style metal/hardcore. If you like this band, or are curious, this may be a good CD to pick up because it's a good mix of everything. All songs previously released. (Excursion/PO Box 20224/Seattle WA 98102) (-Amy)

CINCINNATI MEETS NEWCASTLE: HELMKRUSHER & PRAPARATION H - Split 7" These two awesome bands have been lying low lately, so it's cool to see them still kicking and joining efforts. Helmkruher play Dis-styled punk: tight and punchy with a steady deep tempo. I love them, but it can get sorta monotonous. PrapARATION H are kind of ridiculous on this recording with goofy samples and utter brutality of ax-slaying, blast beat mayhem to the extreme. I like this band, yet this is really a bit much for me. Awesome cover art!! (Wicked Witch/PO Box 3835/1001 AD Amsterdam/Netherlands)

CLAIRIEL - FAIR WEATHER FAN CD Indie type pop-rock in the vein of Superchuck. Pretty well put together songs w/ slightly whiny/raspy vocals w/ guitar driven songs. ($7ppd/No Idea/PO Box 14636/Gainesville FL 32604-3636) (-Amy)

COUNTERVAIL - AN EMPTY HAND FOR A HEART CD-EP Though there seems to be a flood of bands with this kind of metal-hardcore style — I still love it!! This has a lot of Slayer in it and a super heavy dose of power. It thunders with a powerful force while the short guitar leads with a light airy feeling break through. The vocals are raspy and throaty with a punchy style. At times this reminds me of the French Canadian screaming pain and discordant style. I like the layering of the music and the powerful style. Saw this band and they were awesome! The ultra-heaviness blew me away and put a bit smile on my face! (PHYTE Records/$5ppd order through Ebullition/PO Box 680/Goleta CA 93116) ***

CRACKED COP SKULLS - WHY PUSSYFOOT WHEN YOU CAN KILL? 7" I'm always excited to see something new from this awesome band. They sound just like Discharge - with a tight and simple structure and distinct vocals. The thing of it is that they do it damn well. Course just about all the songs sound the same - fitting into that structure — but they rock with it!! They are from England, the record is from: (SOA Records/ Paolo Petralia/ Via Odesi da Gubbio 67/69/00146 Roma Italy)

CRESS/DOOM - Split 10" Cress have proven to be one of my absolute favorites and definitely one of my most favorite new bands this past year. The satisfy my taste-buds all around. So imagine my delight when a new record arrive!! Cress have resurrected and remembered the UK's anarcho-punk sound. They've got a fuzzy distortion with a bit of keyboards (only a bit) and a super catchy punchy beat (ala the old Crass Records sound). They're politically minded as well. And the Scottish accents ring out loud and clear giving it much of it's sound. I completely embrace this band and love it!! Doom are an old favorite making for a great split! They're keeping their Doom-core style alive with their Swedish and Dis hardcore roots and ultra crust punk style. Doom are one of the bands that started all those words and they still rock! The proceeds from this record go to support the McLibel Support Campaign in the UK and you can learn a lot more about it here. (£5 or $10ppd to Flat Earth Records/PO Box 169/Bradford/B07 1YS UK) ****

DEAD END/IDAMIN - SPLIT 7" The Dead end side features manic, thrashy, crusty, Hardcore type stuff. Reminded me a bit of early Disrupt. Deep growly vocals matched with higher pitched ones. Good stuff. I wish there were lyrics here though. I was not as into the Idi Amin side. Mid paced growly hardcore, kind of catchy, with a darker side to it too. I am kind of surprised I have never heard of this band, as they seem to be from Roanoke. This is quite a good split EP. The packaging is basic, but takes care of everything. This 7" even comes with patches for both the bands, a nice touch. (Fusion Records 178 S. Main St. Akron, Ohio 44308 USA) (Beth)

DISAFECT - HOME OF THE SLAVE TAPE Disaffect are one of my favorite bands from the past decade: they're a powerful crust punk band with male and female vocals and a total kick ass sound! They've had several 7"s and splits — and if you've had problems getting your hands on them, or find it a pain to listen to 7"s, this tape has all of the eps as well as a live set recorded in France in 1994. Unfortunately this material doesn't fill up an entire tape, but this is a great band and it's nice to have all this stuff in one place — Especially if you've missed out on any of these releases. Disaffect rule!! (BBP Records & Tapes/3 Read St/ Swindon Wiltshire SN1 5HJ England)

DISGRUNTLED - S/T 7" I like this one. I've been trying to figure out what old band the singer reminds me of. Dead Silence perhaps - with a more abrasive style. The music is hardcore with a touch of emo. Straight-forward and powerful and intriguingly catchy. Lyrics are good as well as the booklet with explanations and personality. I could really get hooked on this band! (The Riot Nerd Coalition/1352 Cinnanni Court/Gloucester Ontario K1T 1Z7 Canada)

DROP DEAD Drop Dead rule! After just coming from hanging out with them (I missed them playing) I play the new record. Within minutes I had already forgotten the trick them told me about the A-side. It plays backwards - as in you put the needle at the end and in goes from inside to out. Novel and weird as that is... it doesn't work on my turntable. It sorta works, just enough for me to get into it and then it skips and gets messed up. So that is a problem. But the B-side plays just perfectly and man — I love Drop Dead! I feel like I overlook how much I like them in light of the fact that they've been around, always nearby, playing a lot and always supporting the North East scene. Suddenly we run into each other in new territory and I realize how great it is to have a history and past with a group of people and you can call friends. Okay, I'm getting emo - but man that is stuff you don't want to overlook. It's funny cause Drop Dead have proceeded to get more popular and cult-ish even. More and more bands have been influenced by them and taken influences from the same places as Drop Dead and yet that does not deny that Drop Dead have been playing totally and utterly brutal manic music forever, and long before it was the thing to do! They've not changed — they just get better and tighter. They're ultra fast with a manic Swedish meets Japanese style, wailing guitar and throbbing everything with Bob's manic brutal screams. Drop Dead have always been one of those bands that draw across the board of genre — hardcore, anarcho-punk, emo and power-violence all rolled into one. Political lyrics. Thoughtful intentions. Doing the right thing. Sometimes you just gotta pay respect to those who have not wavered from their path. Rock on Drop Dead!! They released this record themselves and they're on a world tour so you'll just have to find them to get your own black-metal emo edition cover. (Armageddon label) ****

ENSI - 7" This is perfect - I fucking love it! Ultra heavy Swedish punk with incredibly deep gruff vocals and the music is toned deep and it absolutely rocks! This is the kinda thing that makes me put a "gr" expression on my face and bang my head with my fist in the air. Makes me think of the Mpls punks and the Distraught crew. Fuck yeah - this is the shit! (Crash Mag Records/M. Jansson/Vasterg 15b/63344 Eskilstuna Sweden) ***

FACTORY PILOT - FOOD FOR FOOLS CD This band is so familiar, I don't know why except that perhaps I've listened to this more than I realize and it's grown on me and become familiar in the way an old favorite band does. This punk band from Belgium is fronted by a female singer who's voice is prominent in the sound. It's nearly as loud as the music and the way she sings is clear so you can understand every word - it's almost in a half sing-speak-rhyme style. Other than the fact that at times it may be pretty simple and basic — I really like this band. And that simple and basic sound is totally tight and straight-forward punk of old. (Ceeter & Peter J/Palfijnstraat 3/9000 Gent Belgium)

FED BY RAVENS - 7" Emo-metal-hardcore with all the elements that I like yet. Great name and graphics and layout. I love the communicative message where he writes about what the songs are about. Good intentional delivery. Musically the dual guitars chugg with ultra metal riffs. The vocals are deep and gruff. And there's also lighter melodies mixed in with the heavy chuggs which give it that emo-blend. Quite good, but yet it doesn't put me over the edge quite yet. ($3ppd/Apathy Press Records/PO Box 629/Osseo MN 55369)

FELIPE MONSTRUO - TAPE I like their sound a lot! Some basic 3 chord, but it's pretty interesting to listen to w/ variations in speed and very audible lyrics. Again, political lyrics, all in Spanish about the errors of the constitu-

FINAL CONFLICT - REBIRTH CD This is incredible! After all those years of hibernation Final Conflict are back just where they left off. This CD actually came out last year, but it took a long time for it to land in my hands and since they're out touring this year anyway that's okay. Final Conflict are one of those punk bands that are totally in my roots (as well as so many others) - a classic in their own time. This is totally kick ass hardcore punk with a heavy hard rockin' style. If you know and love Final Conflict - this won't let you down. It's catchy and powerful and gets my fists in the hard and my head rockin' out. Awesome! (Tacklebox Records/4901-906 Morena Blvd./San Diego CA 92117-3432)

FINAL MASSACRE - NOTHING LEFT BUT WASTELAND Tape Another new punk band from Portland — with a heavy Dis (charge) style. Lots of feedback and distortion but not in an out of control manner — just in a very di manner. It's good — this is a style and genre that I like a lot. But these days it's taking a bit more to really hook me on this kinda thing. The recording is decent, but very DIY as in at home in the basement (this isn't a bad thing at all, but it does leave open the fact that with a better recording it may sound even better). The layout and graphics are good. It's all very much in the cliché — studded jackets and the peace punk style with very Discharge-styled lyrics. (PO Box 40113/Portland OR 97240-0113)

FORWARD - WHILE YOU ALIVE CD This is awesome Japanese hardcore punk! It's totally powerful and kicking heavy with a relentless assault of energy. The whole thing is galloping and thunderous with a deep full sound that hits like a whirlwind. It's totally tight, drawing slightly on the Swedish hardcore sound and it's not chaotic at all. This rocks and is totally awesome the whole way through! (HG Fact/Japan)

FUCK ON THE BEACH - FASTCORE ON THE BEACH 7" This is pretty incredible!! Good old Slap-a-Ham delivers the mayhem. This Japanese hardcore at it's most fast & insane! They play at ultra-lightening speed but in a totally tight and in-tempo way (not manic blast beats) just ultra-blazing speed with high pitched manic vocals. I think I started to drool when this started just from my mouth hanging open. (Slap A Ham/PO Box 42083/SF CA 94142-0843)

FUNERAL DRESS - TOTALLY DRESSED 1985-1998 CD This is a band I've had some interest in for awhile so I was happy to get to review this CD. The CD is a compilation of various tracks of this tracking this bands 13-year history. The liner notes have an informative little history about them. The CD was about what I expected, good oi punk, ranging greatly in sound quality, some tracks being demos. I can't say that this CD totally grabbed me like I hoped it would, but I did enjoy it, and I think it could grow on me. It is on the sillier side of Oi punk, which is Ok but it's not really my thing, but if you're a fan of Oi punk, especially of the sloppier silly variety this CD is for you. (Step One Music PO Box 21 Terterden, Kent TN30 7ZZ UK) (Beth)

GENERAL STRIKE - FOR INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM! 7" This band reminds me of a young Aus Rotten. They play kind of rough and raw - but their intentions are good and they've got a lot of potential. It's good anarcho-punk with a mid-paced upbeat energetic style. Multiple vocals. Very strong Industrial Workers message with the graphics but considering their message I wish there were also lyrics. Good first effort - I look forward to more from this band. ($3/Vic Robison/3 Vaughn St./Farmington ME 04344)

GNOB/NOBODY - SPLIT 7" Gnob are from VA, and they play simple, basic, Spazish, power violence type stuff. The songs are short and all kind of run together. The vocals go back and forth between the high pitched as hell screamy variety to the deep as fuck death metal variety. There are some really high pitched nasally vocals that I did not care for at all. Lyrics range from political to weed. You get the picture. The Nobody side was not my thing at all!!! They are completely inappropriate band to do a split with a band like Gnob. They play what I guess is considered Gothic stuff, but I'm not sure, all I know is that it involves depressing as hell lyrics and keyboards. Not good in my opinion, but if you like goth stuff maybe you'd like this. (Lb. Records 412 S. Armistead Ave. Hampton, VA 23669 USA) (Beth) song that makes you sit up and say Wow! But then the rest of the songs bore you to the point where you want to throw the record out the window? Perhaps Grief should just release 1 song a year that rocks. Their songs are long enough that they could pull it off. (Pessimiser Records/PO Box 1070/Hermosa Beach CA 90254) (-Erik)

HARD SKIN - HARD NUTS AND HARD CUNTS CD This is one of the best Oi-Punk bands ever, made all the better by who they are. This reminds me of last year at the Tribal War Headquarters — where this was an often played regular favorite. Broken Rekids has re-released this UK classic here in the states on CD. Unfortunately my copy of this has some skips...but I know this one well and love it anyway! If you missed this one on vinyl the first time around (only last year) and if you are down with the Oi-Punk scene then you definitely don't want to miss out!! ($10/Broken Rekids/PO Box 260402/SF CA 94146) ***

HELLKRUSHER - WASTELAND CD This rules my world!! This is one of my favorite bands and I own so little by them, I was stoked to get this. This is a re-issue of their 1990 LP that has been out of print for quite some time. The CD also features bonus tracks from the Fields of Blood recording, along with a track from a split 7". This album is great! It's so fucking metal! This album has an uncontainable energy; it's very infectious. If you enjoy the 7"s which have been in print over the last few years, this won't let you down. This is British political, metallic punk at it's finest. It's great to see that somebody has finally reissued this record. They did a fine job, it looks and sounds great. This just rules, and you have to track down a copy for yourself! (Bomb Factory Records PO Box Terterden Kent TN30 7ZZ UK) (Beth)

HITMEN - RACK EM UP This label puts out some good stuff! It's so nice to hear a new band and really like them. They play good old hardcore with a good energetic catchy style. Straight-forward with good hooks. The vocals remind me of old Minor Threat - though there's dual vocals & back-ups on some of it - all with a clear sound. I think this could be a new favorite! Total old school hardcore from when hardcore was still a descriptive word for punk. This is damn good!! (Quincy Shanks/PO Box 3035/St. Charles IL 60174)

done in the style of anarcho-punk 7"s with xeroxed booklet of their very political lyrics as well as some further contacts. The whole thing is kinda rough — at times kinda off and disjointed letting the basic-ness of it ring out. It's like a blend of hardcore punk with some ska-punk. Some of it's pretty good some of it's outright horrible. Like I said, I really appreciate the intentions and message and I think that with time they could be really good. ($7/ppd/Inflected Spoon/PO Box 11362/Raleigh NC 27604-0362)

JAMES RIVER SCRATCH 7" I love these Richmond VA boys! (OK, so it's my hometown and I'm biased) It seems like it took about three years for this seven inch to come out, but it was worth the wait. I think this 7" exemplifies this band at their best. JRS play catchy, infectious, hardcore punk rock. Although they are total goofballs, they do have a serious side as well. Their sarcastic sense of humor goes well with their aggressive style of music. JRS are quite unique in their influences, the closest thing I can think of to compare this to is the sound many early to mid 80's California bands had (hey, they cover a Seven Seconds song in their set), but more stripped down and raw. This record should appeal to a wide variety of people, if you like other stuff on Beer City, chances are you'll like this. They have a similar sound in some ways to label mates Urban DK. The only complaint I have is the skimpy packaging. Lyric sheets please!!! You should pick this record up, you'll be seeing more from this band in the near future. (Beer City Records PO Box 26035 Milwaukee WI 53226-0035) (Beth)

JOBBYKRUST - THE DESCENT OF MAN LP This is awesome! Bands like this put me back in perspective and remind me that there's still anarcho-punk-crust scene. This record rocks!! It's like a mix of crust-punk and discordant hardcore. It's full of layering and wandering weaving parts which makes it all push boundaries of definitions and stand on it's own. They've got dual vocals throughout the entire thing that interweave with each other. I'm pretty sure it's one male and one female — but you really can't be sure which is always my favorite way. The vocals are distinct though. The whole thing is rather epic and triumphant and right up my alley!! I feel like I can't quite come up with the right description for this and I know that I'll listen to it continually for the next chunk of time only to wish I'd said so much more about it here. With

GOBLIN'S ARMPIT #20 three dollars.

The beginning of the end. This massive issue contains reprints from older issues as well as heaps of new text and drawings from the poisoned pen of Sean Goblin. Full detailing of the lost dreams of medieval punk and hopes for an apocalypse as well as nihilistic ranting and ravings, depraved hymns to the darkest gods, a vital obsession with goth, moonintrolls and black metal and raging hormonal pinings for the right woman.

GOBLIN'S ARMPIT #21 two dollars.

Goblin's Armpit continues the descent into darkness with an issue focusing on Sean's desire to redesign the entire world. As he continues his quest for a meaningful life and brilliant aesthetic sense the insane truth of Sean's egomaniacal and lustful plans for society are out along with his long repressed love of New Romantic and Gothic music. Shudder as ancient Goblinnish schemes begin to take hideous form and the Punk rock that once ruled Goblin country begins to wither and die. Heaps of art and a gloomy layout give it atmosphere!

GOBLIN'S ARMPIT 3.1 two dollars.

Originally planned as being the all 'nice' issue Goblin's Armpit does not stop the headfirst charge into Sean's old and festering dreams. As he denounces his punk rock origins and looks to the future for inspiration you begin to really wonder what is going on here. Has he lost his mind or just began to find it? The epic visions of Social Goblinnism and Spooky Futurism rise from the derivative rabble and prepare to take the world by storm. Heaps of art and a spooky layout give it something or other. Really, you think I'm joking?

few or many words though — this is fucking awesome!! (Funai Records c/o Wagenplatz/Buchenhofenerstr.63/42329 Wuppertal/Germany)

JUDGEMENT- HAUNT IN THE DARK 7" I think from looking at the cover of this record one can get a pretty good idea what this band is going to sound like. Just from the picture you can tell that this band is going to be basically good but will have its cheesy moments. And that's exactly what I got, some good solid Japanese hardcore mixed in with a rocky element I did not enjoy too much. Over all I really like this 7" though. The first side really kicked ass, while the second side is when it got a little too rock for me. But, if you're a fan of Japanese hardcore you should get this release, you'll enjoy it. Once again HG Fact did a great job with the packaging. This 7" is a full color gatefold! (HG Fact 401 Hongo-m. 2-36-2 Yayoi-Cho Nakano-KU Tokyo 164 Japan) (Beth)

KILL THE MAN WHO QUESTIONS - ST 7" This is a band to sit up and take notice of! One of the best new bands to bridge the worlds of political hardcore and punk together in a great way. Dual male and female vocals over an aggressively noisy and distorted power-packed explosion! This band rules! They're like an old friend already! They remind me a lot of the discordant emo-hardcore bands that I like so much with some Nausea influence as well. The vocals rock! Niki has so much power in her growls and both vocals belt it out together intertwining! It's relentless. I've got a new favorite band!! (Bloodlink/PO Box 7414/Philadelphia PA 19101) ***

KING PRAWN - FRIED IN LONDON CD I've always sorta admired and respected that bands from England always manage to bridge new ground and blend styles of music together in a unique and challenging way. Words of Warning is a label stemming from anarcho-punk roots and bridging out to cover more diverse musical ground. Often times my punk snobiness doesn't tolerate too much diversity. But this King Prawn CD was a pleasant surprise. Though it has a bit of rap-funk style it's also heavy on the reggae/dub reggae — which I love — especially from these English accented folks. In the past I've loved Knucklehead and P.A.I.N. and this band reminds me even more of Bender. I found this quite listenable and enjoyable. (Words of Warning/PO Box 703/Bristol BS99 UK)

KITTENS - HAWAII 7" I've got to say that I really just don't like this. It's noisy. The vocals sound like they're through a mega-phone. It kinda rocks out in this noisy garage rock way. The guitars have this distorted fuzzy sound and yet it's not at all thick heavy sound at all. They've got a strong animal rights message with info on Peta, but I'll pass on the music. (Denied A Custom/c/o Yoshiyuki Takahashi/3-5-12-106 Hashigadai/Narita-Shi Chiba 286-0037 Japan)

KWISATZ HADERACH/ENCYCLOPEDIA OF AMERICAN TRAITORS - Split 7" BRUTAL! You'd never expect this level of intensity from these emo kids. Both sides are solid. If you're into the new emo power-violence, you've gotta find this. The Traitors have been rumored to have had many a bloody show. Kwisatz has the dueling male/female vocalists. Too bad if you haven't seen them already, I think they're done, but pick up this little moment of their existence. (21-A Southduke St./Millersville PA 17551) (-Amy)

LAST IN LINE/LANDMINE SPLIT CD I really like Last In Line. They play old-school styled hardcore that is punchy, chuggy and powerful while holding onto that hardcore-punk quality. Keeping some punk in it — rather than making the distinction between the two subcategories. It's right up my alley! Landmine sound more like Japanese hardcore — of the raw abrasive manic sort — which isn't as much my thing. They vocals in particular contribute to the Japanese style with a voice that cracks at times and another more guttural one. They do vary things around from total tempo hardcore to faster thrashy stuff as well which I appreciate. ($5ppd/DC Records/574 Carlisle Ct./Glen Ellyn IL 60137)

MANUAL SEVEN - THE SHATTERING 7" Wow, I hadn't put together that this band is from Philly; that it's "Mike's" band. I like Mike's vocals a lot — they're gnarly and mangled with a bit of death metal style at times. The way the music blends though makes this very different — the guitars have a very high-end sound. I really keep wanting it to be deeper and heavier. However, the high-end lack of distortion gives it a certain sound unlike I'm used to (which is always refreshing). It reminds me a bit of the discordant manic side of emo. And the music has a lot of interesting twists and little ditty bits while Mike's voice is growling away. Very cool. (Profane Existence/PO Box 8722/Mpls MN 55408)

MEN'S RECOVERY PROJECT- IMMENSE OVARY REJECT 7" Wow. Men's Recovery Project never ceases to baffle me. This band is so incredibly weird. This seven-inch consists of some songs which remind me of Born Against in that they have a fairly straight up hardcore sound, but then there are some songs which I cannot think of a good way to describe. It is very experimental. This is in no way as strange as MRP's first release, but it is still out there. If you are already a fan of MRP that will please you. And if you enjoy experimental hardcore with electronic parts and nonsensical lyrics, this will be right up your alley. I have a feeling MRP are the best at what they do, but I'm just not into what they do. However, I must admit I have never seen them live and that may change my opinion. (Walkabout Records PO Box 203 Mentone Melbourne Victoria Australia 3194) (Beth)

MOTIVE - I VS. THE BECKONING OF DARKNESS CD Some would call this emo-core, but with all of the double-bass antics & occasional weird jazz parts, I wouldn't know where to "classify" it??? Lots of stop & go stuff in the music department. Lyrics about hardcore & non-hardcore "issues" with some sung, some whispers, and others are out-right screams. Not my cup-of-tea, but these kids do what they do with a lot of conviction (at least that is the impression I get from their lyrics). (Exit/PO Box 263/New York, NY 10012) (-Dave)

MURDER CITY WRECKS - GET WRECKED CD These rockers are from Detroit and have that working class fuck-shit-up attitude in their songs. Pretty solid CD w/somewhat of a Social Distortion sound combined w/maybe the Dead Boys. (GMM Records/PO Box 15234/Atlanta GA 30333 or Murder City Wrecks/PO Box 35733/Detroit MI 48235) (-Amy)

MURDERERS/JERKOFFS - Split CD A good split CD with two raunchy punk rock bands. I didn't even realize the Murderers were still around, so this was a good surprise. They play with a clean guitar style that is very old rock'n'rolley but vocally it's gnarled and all around totally tight, punchy and punk. The Jerkoffs are a great partner to the Murderers. They've got a more snotty vocalized style and more Oi's and pogo bounce beat. Streetpunk. One of the best things

Breizh France)

OVERCAST - EXPECTANTION DILUTION CD 12 song re-issue of the debut full length... Very metal production style (vocal effects, etc.) makes their fast & furious style of hardcore come across really well, especially with all of the style changes on each of the songs. Quiet acoustic parts one minute & out of nowhere are fast chugga chugga parts... Neat stuff! (Edison Recordings/PO Box 42586/Philadelphia, 19101-2586) (-Dave)

OVERCAST - FIGHT AMBITION TO KILL CD Their second release & just as scary as their first... 9 new tunes to warp your mind even more... The vocals have gone to even more areas that were only hinted to on their first effort. Still tight & metal musically, with more samples between songs to scare you all that much more...

Beer City has done! (Beer City/PO Box 26035/Milwaukee WI 53226-0035)

NAKED AGGRESSION - GUT WRINGING MACHINE CD I have always really liked Naked Aggression. Haven't heard much about them in a long time, except that recently Phil the guitar player died from a severe asthma attack — which was totally shocking news. Anyway, not having heard much about the band, I didn't even realize there was a new release coming — so this arrived with surprise and excitement — and it's really damn good! While their sound has filled out quite a bit, they still have the same passionate punch to their songs. Kirsten belts the words out and hooks me as always. The music, like I said has a really full sound — with a lot of layering and more complex style. I'd almost guess at times that there's extra instruments — but I think that is just a good recording session. This is an awesome record that is totally catchy and powerful! They've maintained their sound and it's gotten better at the same time! (Grilled Cheese Cargo Music)

NEVERFALL - SYMBOLS OF INNER SELF CD How cool is it to have a band's ad jump out at you from the many ads of a hardcore fanzine and then by chance when you go to the review pile the first thing you pick up is that very same band. I was pretty stoked. And this CD is right up my alley — the metal crunching hardcore alley that's. The chugga chugga guitars are brutal and totally chop with a vicious crunch. The vocals are guttural and deep in heaviness. This is powerful metal hardcore the way I like it! And this will definitely be one to listen to regularly for the future! (Shandle Records/PO Box 1032/Mentor OH 44061-1032)

NO COMPLY/DYSLEXICS SPLIT 7" No comply side consists of fun, short, jumpy, snotty punk. This is very 77 and makes you want to jump up and down. Silly 77 style snotty tongue in cheek lyrics. If you like Blanks 77, the Casualties, or any other band of that new oi-punk genre, you'll probably enjoy this. The Dyslexics play the same style of pogo attack punk, but with less nasally vocals. A fun release and the two bands compliment each other, although it seems that the Dyslexics had a few more serious things to say. (Savior Records PO Box 3306 Alhambra CA 91803) (Beth)

NOOTHGRUSH/DEADBODIES/EVERYWHERE SPLIT 7" The Noothgrush side is agonizingly S-L-O-W!!! This is definitely sludge core, reminiscent of Grief, and slower EyeHateGod. If you're in the right mood this kicks ass, it's really one of the best things I've heard of this genre. I am usually bored by this kind of stuff, but I was pretty into this. DeadBodies/Everywhere were more up my alley. A little bit of the EyeHateGod metal stuff, but not so slow!! Blazingly fast at times, slower at others, with lots of distortion on the guitar. Powerful dual scream vocals. No lyric sheet. To me this seems like a strong and typical release for the Bovine label, who as always do a good job. (Bovine PO Box 2134, Madison WI 53701 USA) (Beth)

ONE WAY SYSTEM - SEARCH YOUR SOUL 7" One Way System are one of my all time long standing favorite old UK punk bands. One of the few that I'm glad to see on the revival. This new stuff is really catchy. The vocals are distinctly the same and yet the music seems to be a little more catchy and less hard. It's got less of that classic Oi-Punk sound and more of a unique flair. I'm having a hard time finding the words to describe it — but I love it! Nice record sleeve and tons of photos of the NYC punks. (Mass Prod/BP 287/35005 Rennes Cedex/

(same address as above) (-Dave)

PENADAS POR LA LEY - SEXO DEBIL? CD 14 song CD by these young ladies from Argentina. All the songs are in Spanish and the music is basic 3 chord punk. Their energy is amazing. This band is really cool. If you have any interest in Hispanic punk/hardcore try to write or get it through: (Penadas Por La Ley/Luis Esteban/Calle 64No691 12 (1900) la Plata/Buenos Aires Argentina) (-Amy)

PIEBALD - SOMETIMES FRIENDS FIGHT CD I've heard this name a lot in the emo hardcore circuit so I thought I might be into it, but I was disappointed. They play very with a very discordant style, which in and of itself could be fine, but the notes are very sour and awkward giving it a horrible quality that I don't like at all. Some it is rather mello and other parts more intense. One singer has a deeper voice that I like while the other has a more annoying and grating one that doesn't sit well with me. This is not for me at all and it makes me cringe. ($7ppd NA/$9ppd world/Point The Blame Records/10738 Ave Millen/Montreal PQ H2C 3E6 Canada)

PINK TURDS IN SPACE - THE COMPLETE... CD This is a classic all-time favorite band: Anarcho-Punk from Ireland. They're a band that have always for me been at the roots of the punk scene — inspiring so many other bands to come. The vocals are the really distinct sound — high pitched and totally unique. Some of the stuff has a female singer and other a male. Classic stuff here. It's hard to even describe it to those who've never heard of this band. They play hardcore-punk: fast, tight, heavy, crunchy, distinctly accented and totally unique. I can hear the PTIS in so many bands around now. Since there records they've got a split LP, a full length LP, a split 7" are all nearly impossible to find and most definitely out of print — I was really excited to hear about this CD coming together. These discography things are great for having everything in one place for bands who's stuff is hard to find and even if you've got the stuff it's still nice to have it all in one place for a good long listen. PTIS are one of the best bands that ever were so how much more highly can I recommend this? In addition to all the vinyl there are also some demos and a few live tracks making for 38 in all. (Rejected Records/9 Woodlands Ave/ Dun Laoghaire Co. Dublin/ Ireland. Distributed by Active Distribution)

PUS/OMOBNA - Split 7" Wow for this one! OMOBNA are from So. Cal but are fronted by an Englishman — and the style of this is classic UK peace punk where the English vocals ring loud and clear and the Crass-inspired message does come through in the lengthy lyrics. Awesome! The song-structure is soft and sorta slow (Sounds-like) and the vocals are prominent and clear. PUS are always a favorite with their classic UK punk sound. Dual vocals with strong accents and the total anarcho-punk sound. Super catchy. I've heard these songs before (they're all on the Death From the Skies CD). PUS are one of my favorites cause they totally capture what I have always loved about the old UK punk! (Know Records/PO Box 90579/Long Beach CA 90809)

PYRAMID SCHEME - I HAVE A PLOT TO KILL THE PRESIDENT 7" This is decent straight-forward hardcore punk played tight and punchy. Though there are some occasional break-down guitar leads that just suck. Good artwork. This is good, but nothing ground-breaking. (128 Bonner/Dayton OH 45410)

REACT - DISTURBING THE SOULS... 7" In the continuing succession of bands that I have known as "Bill's band", React is the latest insurgence from the Connecticut punks. What has frustrated me over time with this group is that every band they've got is excellent, but often short lived. For awhile I kept saying: "Nope, I'm not going to pay any attention to Bill's new band until he just calls it "Bill". But of course that is never true, cause just as soon as I hear them I'm hooked. React has come about since I've been gone from the NYC area, therefore I've not had the chance to see or hear this band — so this 7" arrive and knocked me down. React combine all the talents of the Connecticut punks for creating some kick-ass heavy Swedish-Dis-styled hardcore. This time around they're got dual male and female vocals (and the female singer sounds so much like Amy from Nausea!). Nice pagan/Celtic like artwork too! This is awesome! It's heavy, strong and tight with a throbbing and kicking tempo. Fuck yeah!! (Profane Existence/PO Box 8722/Mpls MN 55408) ***

RENDER USELESS - ST CD A Canadian emo band with a strong stylistic likening to the old DC style. It's very discordant and disjointed in a clean non-distorted way. Lots of jazzy raw and raspy bits. It takes a whole new style than what I'm usually drawn to. Where I like discordance with the heavy distorted power way — this has a clean guitar sound and all these weird little sounds that I don't know how to describe. What I do like is that it's got a fair amount of diversity throughout which makes it all very listenable. I feel like this band is coming from another direction than where I have my descriptive roots, but I do keep hearing this DC thing — both in music and vocals. This is solid and well done — I'm interested — yet not totally hooked either. (Clue #2/PO Box 402/Maple Ridge BC/B2X 8K9 Canada)

RIOT SYSTEM - FIT THE IMAGE 7" Basic. Raw raging 80's style hardcore! The production is on the poor side, but given the style of music it kind of fits. Riot System are an Australian 3-piece who would have fit in great on one of those international hardcore comps of the mid 80's. The lyrics consist of rather basic punk stuff about riots and being on the dole etc. Although this is nothing groundbreaking it's a worthy release. A good one from HG Fact! (401 Hongo- M 2-36-2 Yayoi-Cho Nakano- Ku Tokyo 164 Japan) (Beth) SHINE - ST 7" Okay so, St. Vitus used to be one of my favorite bands and this is Wino from St. Vitus's new band. Wino's vocals are eerie though, cause they are so distinctly Wino, and it will take me back to listening to St. Vitus — and that is the cool part. The vocals and guitar sound are distinct. This is one of the originators of that heavy sound. The problem is that this is also about a lot of guitar rock which I don't like at all. So, while Shine can rock my heart out at times, at others I get totally bored and lost in that world of guitars. (Shine/12810 Matey Rd./Wheaton MD 20906)

SILENT MAJORITY - BASED ON A TRUE STORY CD I get obsessed with some bands. I hear them and see them and just get totally hooked — and that is what happened with Silent Majority. Their first CD is one of my favorite things to listen to on a regular basis, so I was really excited to see a new release from them. Silent Majority have their own style of emo hardcore that goes beyond the expected norm of those descriptions. It's that pushing of boundaries and blending of a unique style that makes them really stand out and charm people so much. They've got a lot of soul and heartfelt feeling in the lyrics and music. It comes across with a powerful delivery that is aggressive yet melodic and emotional and ultimately incredibly catchy with all the hooks to grab me and take me along with it. Totally invigorating and awesome! Considering how much I love this band, and how many times I've already listened to this CD, I know it will be one to remain on the player for a long time to come! (Exit Records/PO Box 263/NY NY 10012) ***

SIZZLE - TWO WEEKS TO LATE CD Unique band. They pull it off amazingly well though. Mix of hardcore, Blink 182, MxPx style punk with Bouncing Souls type ska, topped off by lyrics in Spanglish. Are you confused? Decipher for yourself. Some songs are totally intense old style hardcore an din the same song the chorus is bubble gum ska. But it works somehow, really. (Box Car Records/PO Box 1141/Melbourne FL 32902) (-Amy)

SKABS - THE GREATEST HITS... 7" Hooray for the Skabs! This 7" has been a long long time in surfacing, having been released initially as a tape. But finally, after many recording attempts — they've done it — and got these songs on a slab of vinyl. For anyone who's been reading S&L for awhile, you may know that the Skabs were one of my favorites in NYC and I've praised them highly in the past so I'm so happy to see this. I love this band!! They're an amazing blend of Polish, Greek and Spanish punk — creating a super catchy, very new wave style of punk. Helen's got an amazing voice that occasionally squeaks. Everyone sings. The keyboards give this it's distinct sound reminding me of the movie Breaking Glass or some early 80s off-beat punk band's movie. I love the Skabs — for me, they will always embrace and represent my time in NYC and at ABC NO RIO. (WACP Records/12 Wayatt Circle/Somerville MA 02143) ***

SLIGHT SLAPPERS/SHORT HATE TEMPER- SPLIT LP Slight Slappers play blazingly fast Japanese hardcore. I like this release better than anything else I've heard by them, which is to say I think they are getting better. I really enjoyed their side of this LP. They play this style extremely well, and I do love me some good Japanese hardcore. Manic distorted guitar, high pitched vocals scream vocals, and fast as it gets drums. Short Hate Temper hails from the USA and are quite similar to the Slight Slappers. Fast, raging hardcore. This does get slower than the Slight Slappers, more breakdowns. I feel that this band might be considered power violence, but I'm really not sure any more. The point is that both these bands rock, and you should get this LP. If you've liked other Sound Pollution releases in the past, you can count on it that you'll dig this too. (Sound Pollution PO Box 17742 Covington

SUBB - THE HIGHSTEP TO HELL CD This epitomized the nightmare for me in reviewing CDs. It starts with a sing-songy like ballad, bursts into a horrible predictable power pop punk outburst and then ends up blending in the ska-punk thing complete with horns. For the genre it's okay, but I'm so sick to death of all these things that wrapped into one it annoys me to no end. Not to mention the fact that I hate all of these elements in the first place. Yuck! (Point The Blame Records/10738 Ave Miller/Montreal PQ H2C 3E6 Canada)

SUBMISSION HOLD - PROGRESS: AS IF SURVIVAL MATTERED CD There are few bands that really get under my skin, give me goose-bumps and go straight into my heart. Submission Hold are one of those bands: total favorites. There a band that I feel close to as little and as well as I know them - like kindred souls. If I were going to have only a few things to listen to, Submission Hold would be one of the things I would want to have. Jen's got the most incredible voice: the ability to sing beautiful melodies and then scream about the injustices of the world. The booklet that comes with this CD is massive with intensely wonderful words as great graphics as well. This CD has the full length Progress tape as well as their two 7"s - which makes this a great CD to maximize on your listening to this band. (and they sell them for dirt cheap too!) I could rave and rave endlessly, as you probably know. They are a unique gem in the land of punk, playing a disjointed and discordant style that incorporates some untraditional instruments and utter passion. Submission Hold rules!! Don't forget your garlic! ($7ppd/Allium Records/PO Box 21533/1850 Commercial Dr./Vancouver BC V5N 4A0 Canada) ****

SUBMISSION HOLD/SAKE - Split LP When Jen from Submission Hold described Sake as her favorite band; with a woman going mad on vocals and playing violin - I took her words to heart and she was right - this rules! This has me totally hooked! Not only is there some totally ruckus punk rock mayhem but then the absolutely beautiful melodies on the violin. There are male and female vocals. The predominantly aggressive harsh female vocals remind me a bit of Whisper from Zero Hour. The music has a experimental edge, discordant at times with the totally unique quality of the violin, but it stays totally tight and it rocks! Sake goes so well with Submission Hold who have their own unique musical qualities. On this recording they have a flute and piano to add to their ensemble. Jen can belt out her screams and then can sing w/ the most beautiful voice. I love Submission Hold!!! The songs on this vinyl were also released on a tape called "Progress" and also on a CD by the same name. This split record rules - bringing together two of the most unique and two of my most favorite punk bands. Very emotional, very thoughtful, very political and very heartfelt. Yeah!!! (Hopscotch Records #6/PO Box 1143/ Cardiff CA 92007) ****

SUFFER - S/T 7" Suffer are like the Drop Dead of the UK (how appropriate that they toured together a few years ago). Good to see Suffer are still churning out the mayhem with their manic disjointed abrasive style of hardcore. I enjoy and respect Suffer - particularly for their DIY ethics and support of the scene. They're one of those bands though that I like a lot, enjoy if I see, like when I listen to - and yet don't totally rock out or go totally insane for on record. This record in particular seems to have even more weird bridging parts: feedbacking noise and then all out insanity. Totally awesome for those who like hardcore brutality with thoughtful consciousness interwoven! (Flat Earth Records/PO Box 169/Bradford/BD7 1YS UK)

SWALLOWING SHIT - LET MY STRUGGLING SPIRIT IN ITSELF BE FREE 7" This band is a little over the edge into the grind-core mayhem, blast beat driven insanity world for my tastes; however I do really like that this record comes with a ton of information (about Uranium Mining in Australia) as well as other educational bits. And the lyrics "that may offend the Honkys" are awesome: poignant and right on! They play ultra-fast and really tight - the kind of thing I love to see live but usually don't listen to at home. They kick butt though. (Spiral Objective/PO Box 126/Oaklands Park SA/Australia 5046 Australia)

THE BANNED - JUNE 98 DEMO TAPE The Banned have been playing a lot of good punk shows in the NYC area over the past few years and this is a new 5 song tape. I'm pretty into it. It's good old punk with a touch of Oi (though thankfully no chorusing Oi's). It's got a catchy and alluring sound that has me sorta hooked into repetitive listens. The recording is decent with some bass-end adjustment. At times the vocals reminded me a bit of Leatherface, but for the most part it's all real fast and tight with a lot of punch. Very catchy with a unique flair that has my ear pretty hooked! (c/o Fourth Dimension Records/268 Hollywood Ave./Yonkers NY 10707)

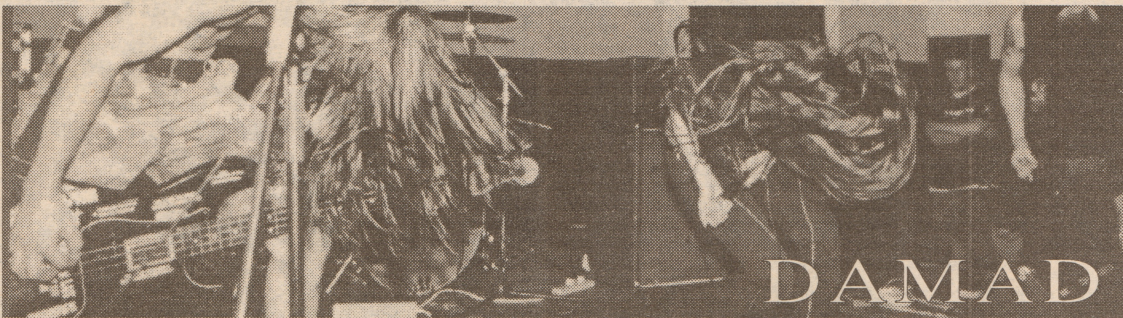

THE BASTARD BRIGADE - 200 PROOF BASTARDS 7" At times this is okay: catchy guitar riffs and chorusey punk with whoo-oh and oh-yeahs and the like. They've got a bit of cow-poke breakdown in one song which is kinda scary. It's okay, like decent basic punk from a band in the middle of nowhere, but it doesn't leave much of a mark on me. (Eerie Records/2408 Peace St/ Erie PA 16502)

THE BOILS - WHEN THE SUN GOES DOWN CD I love the Boils! It's been awhile since I've heard them and they've gotten super fucking tight with more of a strong Oi-Punk sound. This new stuff kicks! They've got 8 new songs of hard-hitting, street-punk with a totally tight sound and a strong pogo-able beat. I think that they kids will absolutely love this! Unlike so many Oi-Streetpunk bands on the rise these days, The Boils have good lyrics and plenty of their own flair which keep them from being lost in a sea of boring repetition. The Boils give the Streetpunk genre a kick in the butt and give me some new inspiration and they will charm you with their catchy anthems! Yeah!! (Creep Records/Suite 220 252 E. Market St./West Chester PA 19381) ***

THE BURDENS - WORKING CLASS JOKE CD ANOTHER OLD STYLE rock type punk band w/ songs titles like "Better Off Dead" & "Burden on Society". They sound like Rancid, Social Distortion and maybe even some Sex Pistols w/ that affected English accent. If you're into these bands, they pull off their style quite well. (GMM/Burdens/22280 Walling Rd./Geyersville CA 95441) (-Amy)

THE C*NTS - A SECRET HISTORY OF... CD I had heard Of The C*nts long ago, but never really HEARD them until this hit my cd player. Formed during the 77-78 era of punk & ended (I think) in 1988... This cd takes compiles a few tracks from each of their five lp's worth of material. A steady of Stooges-style punk rock chaos with all of the kooky lyrics & 3-chord abuse that seems long forgotten some 20 years later. Very much along the lines of what I expected, but still not a let down. 21 tracks in all. Limited edition of 1000(?). (Disturbing Records/3238 S. Racine/Chicago, IL 60608) (-Dave)

THE END OF THE CENTURY PARTY - SONGS, DANCE, DRUMS 7" I've had this attraction to this band, thinking that they were one I liked; perhaps drawn in by their artwork. But I think finally I can realize that they are way too spastic and abrasive to sit well with me. This is painful brutality to the extreme with outbreaks of raw and discordant mayhem. It's really grating all around, and though it has moments of rockin tempo overall it leaves me unsettled. It hurts. (Enslaved/PO Box 169/Forster Court/Bradford West Yorkshire BD7 1YS UK or Refusenik Records/PO Box 2018/Hove BN3 3HS England)

TOCCATA AND BULLA - CONCEBIDOS EN LA TIERRA BASTARDA CD This is a 3" CD from this Ecuadorian band. They play extreme brutal hardcore. I'm missing the vocabulary of bands to compare or describe them to. They play really tight, with an overall speed that is broken up by clipped punchy breakdowns all with in a short to the point song. I know this is a whole genre of the hardcore scene who're loving this stuff - the power violence scene? It's really good too! (Marco Granja/PO Box 05-01-560/Latacunga Ecuador released by Profane Existence Far East c/o Izumi Kubo/35 Sannachio, Sennyuji, Higashiyamaku, Kyoto 605-0977 Japan)

TOTAL RESISTENCIA - TAPE Spanish hardcore with screaming anthemic vocals w/basic fast 3 chord punk songs. Pretty tight band. Political songs about joining together and revolution and basically actually doing something about causes you believe in. Pretty good lyrics - all in Spanish. (WC Records/Juan I Herrero/PO Box 41019/28080 Madrid Spain) (-Amy)

TOXIC NARCOTIC - YOU WRECK 'EM 7" Although this band has been around for quite some time and I even own several things by them I do not consider myself really familiar with them. To me this release seems consistent with everything else I've heard. It's fast and brutal. Deep raspy vocals with a powerful guitar and drum sound to back it up. The songs really grab you. Good, if fairly basic political lyrics, mixed in with some less serious stuff. Good punchy choruses. I would definitely recommend this release. (Rodent Popsicle Records/PO Box 335 Newton CTR., MA 02159 USA) (Beth)

U.S.F. - TAPE Crazy ultra fast hardcore from Israel. Pretty straight-forward, good music, kinda bad recording. Also wrote to them if you want to know anything about the Israeli hop/punk scene. ($4ppd or $2 w/ a blank tape/ Fede Rotstein/PO Box 647/Nes-Tziona/79101 Israel) (-Amy)

URBN DK - INNOCENT VICTIMS LP This band has been an extremely pleasant surprise. I got to review two things by them this month, and really enjoyed both of them. This band plays basic raw aggressive classic hardcore. A band that for some reason come to mind when describing URBN DK is Kill Your Idols, who to me also pull off this style of 80's basic hardcore well. URBN DK have their own slant though. Their sound is familiar, but not rehearsed. This album rages and thrashes on with good solid, if a bit basic, political lyrics to back up the music. Everything with this band is simple, but good. I wish there was more I can say, but really I just recommended that anyone who enjoys fast, aggressive punk rock check this band out (Beer City Records PO Box Milwaukee WI 53226-0035 USA) (Beth)

URBN DK/LOS SUBVERSIVOS - SPLIT 7" This is one of those international releases I so enjoy. URBN DK are from the US, although I'm not sure where, and Los Subversivos are from Argentina. The URBN DK side kicks your ass!! This is straight up hardcore right up my alley!! Blazing, aggressive old style punk rock. Think of maybe NOTA or Negative Approach but a little more old punk thrown in there.... I don't quite know how to describe it but I like it!! Los Subversivos are an excellent band to do a split with URBN DK. They play a similar style of hardcore punk. It is basic and raw. The lyrics are in Spanish, but there are translations (URBN DK side also has translations). I like the fact that this band throws in some folksy bits, and I always love to hear a band sing in their native language. The label that released this did an excellent job. (Small Budget Records B.P.N. 07 78110 Levesinet France) (Beth)

VA ARGH!... A BRANTFORD COMPILATION 7" This has 4 good hardcore punk bands from E. Canada. The Twerps are the heaviest, with a strong sound, slightly metal guitars and gruff vocals. Conspiracy follow along behind the Twerps with really a tight fast and punchy straight-forward hardcore style. The Young Offensive are very punk with a kicking pogo beat piercing female vocals. Outcast are also very punk with a catchy style, pogo beat and rolling vocals. ($4ppd US cash/Soap & Spikes Records/431 Burlington Ave Apt #5/Burlington Ontario L7S 1R3 Canada)

VA BAY AREA CHECKING IN WITH THE WORLD CD The title is perfect. What have you heard in the past 5 years from the bay area? WE kinda forgot about all those bands ever since Lookout turned to... Well anyway. 27 of my new favorite

Engine and Somnaut. All three bands do the telling a story over some inconsequential music w/ the point being the story. If you like King Missile... (Bloodlink Records/PO Box 7414/Philadelphia PA 19101) (-Amy)

VA THE WHOLE MAGILLA VOL. 1 CD 23 bands, none of which I was familiar with until hearing this... The bands are nation-wide in origin as well as in style, with some going for the pop-punk simplicity, some doing the crusty-grind-thing, and others follow the traditional hardcore path. Nothing really blew me away on here, but with all of the musical variety, it makes up for that. (Poor Excuse Records/49 Gladstone Ave./West Islip, NY 11795) (-Dave)

VA VIDA-LIFE... BENEFIT 7" FOR PROJECT VIDA A compilation of brutality by the likes of Charles Bronson, Palatka, Locust, Dangermouse, Short Hate Temper, Eucharist, MK-Ultra, In/Humanity and Q-Factor. A lot of short bursting mayhem from some of the best of the genre, all on a short burst of vinyl. It's impossible to describe all these brutal bursts of aggressive powerful hardcore. Since this comes from Lengua Armada, the packaging format is awesome: very creative and one of a kind-like. Nice job. Project Vida is a group promoting safe sex and AIDS awareness education. (Lengua Armada Records/2340 W. 24th St/Chicago IL 60608)

VA VIOLENCE, A JAPANESE HARDCORE COMPILATION This Jap. H.C. comp. was put by the American label Six Weeks. This 8" flexi features Flash Gordon, Real Reggae, Argue Damnation, Nice View, One Size Fits All, and No Think. Although I had never even heard of these bands prior to picking this up, I was pleasantly surprised. This seems to me to be a good sampling of current up and coming bands in Japanese Hardcore. All the bands pretty much play the same style of thrash hardcore that Japan has become so well known for. The packaging is high quality for a flexi. There is some cool, pushy artwork on the back. This flexi is something that fans of Japanese hardcore should definitely seek out. (Six Weeks 225 Lincoln Ave. Cotai CA 94931 USA) (Beth)

VA WHERE'S MY SHOE: THE SWEAT WATER COMP For those who don't know the Sweat Water Tavern is the Brooklyn punks second home: it's a pub owned by good friends & a great place. This compilation, like the Squat or Rot comps from years ago bring together the diversity of the punk scene in NYC. In this case, bands who have been a part of the Sweat Water Tavern. Listening to this CD makes me miss it all. We've got the 86'd fronted by Kendall's tough vocals - they sound awesome! Astroland and their spastic breed of hardcore - I always think of them as the Sweat Water house band since they have painted their murals in the place, Banner of Hope - who totally knocked me out with total Vice Squad style UK punk!, Disassociate have live tracks from the radio, some of which are pretty noisy and all of it heavy on the blast beat driven mayhem of grindcore, Distraught have only one song on here - but it's my favorite song (not recorded anywhere else) and it rules! Pity the Nation is Kevin's new band of political punk with Steven on the Sax, Public Nuisance are resurrected with a song and the Spider Cunts have give us a good dose of raunchy female-vocaled punk. Plus a few songs from Yum Yum Tree with high-pitched female vocals (this comps got a high percentage of all girl bands and female vocaled bands which is nice to see!) Rounding out the diversity and moving away from the punk genre is Hororka with an acoustic 70s style song, more rock from Steamhead, total rap dub from Trumystic and a gothic art Nick Cave like experience with the World/Inferno F.S. - which is awesome! (Angst Records/302 Bedford Ave #327/Brooklyn NY 11211)

VA WHY MUST WE DIE FOR OUR PLATE - AN ANIMAL RIGHTS COMPILATION 7" This is a comp of crusty-punk band with Animal Rights, Factory Farming and Vegetarianism as the theme. The bands included are Detestation (always a favorite, I think this may be an older recording as Saira's voice sounds small), Depressor (drum-machine driven crust ala old Pitchshifter), End Result (good crust-punk hardcore with a lot of distortion) and Idi Amin (unfortunately my least favorite on here). Comes with a good booklet and information on the theme. Good project! ($4ppd/Dire-Action Records/562 Woodland Ave #64/Lexington KY 40508)

VA-SWEDISH HC COMP CD This kicks ass!!! This is probably one the best new release I have reviewed this month. I love Swedish HC and this CD samples all the best in newer Swedish HC. This CD features Rajotius, Dismachine, Diskonto, Abuse and Toltitar to name a few. There really isn't a loser on this comp, really this is just one of the best comps I've seen in a long time. The bands are similar enough that you'll probably want to listen to most of them, but different enough it's not impossible to tell the bands apart. The bands all play that style of raging metallic punk hardcore that Sweden has become so well known for. The liner notes give a little history of Swedish punk that's informative. This is a great release! Highly recommended!! (HG Fact 401 Hongo-M, 2-36-2 Yayoi-Cho, Nakano-KU Tokyo 164 Japan) (Beth)

VOMITUS/ FLUX OF DISORDER - SPLIT 7" Vomit plays Extreme Noise Terror style of thrashy hardcore. They do it quite well. They use several different kinds of vocals; all of which I enjoy except the kind of melodic singing voice one. It actually fits in pretty well. I just don't dig it too much. Great use of the deeper death metal vocals though, and the drumming kicks my butt!! The Flux of Disorder side features much of the same brutal hardcore attack. The production seems a little off at times, but on the whole this is solid. There's some cool artwork, but the packaging is basic for the most part. A good investment. (Nonsense Recordings PO Box 381143 Clinton TWP, MI, 48038- 0077 USA) (Beth)

Five Lessons Learned

CD/LP/CS

1999 PRIMATE FREEDOM TOUR

In May, 1997, one individual began a seven month tour of the seven regional primate research centers in the United States. Conducting nine day vigils in each location, the purpose was to spark a national debate over primate experimentation. The success of this tour went far beyond anyone's expectations.

It is a rare occasion when national organizations, grassroots groups, and people of all ages and from all walks of life come together for a common cause. The 1997 tour was such an occasion, creating a solid foundation from which a successful abolition campaign can be built.

With the seed in place, the campaign has already started to grow. The growth will continue during the summer of 1999 with a national tour against primate experimentation. This will definitely be the most important and successful event in the history of the movement against animal research in the United States.

Your involvement is crucial for the tour to reach its full potential and beyond. Get involved now and help plan for this important step in the abolition of primate experimentation.

SUMMER 1999

A bus full of activists pulls up to the University of Washington, the home of the Washington Regional Primate Research Center. The bus unloads for a few days of intense teach-ins, protests, and educational activities.

At the second stop on the tour, more vans filled with activists are added to the caravan and the pressure begins to build. All across country as the caravan travels it continues to grow. Stopping at Regional Primate Centers and other primate experimentation facilities, the tour exposes to the United States public the medical, scientific, moral, and ethical fraud of primate research.

Finally, after the last Regional Primate Center, the tour ends with a five day protest/teach-in at the National Institutes of Health.

These are simple ideas. The tour is in the preliminary planning stages and your ideas and assistance are needed. We have the ability and the creativity to organize the most effective resistance to primate experimentation this country has ever seen. It is up to you to get involved.
